Spy Trials for Four Are Asked by Probers; 2 Scientists Included

House Group Says It Has So Far 'Only Scratched Surface' on Spies

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Spy trials for four persons were recommended yesterday by the House Committee on Un-American Activities in a 36-page report critical of the failure of the Justice Department to prosecute those the committee said were guilty of Communist espionage on atomic energy and related secrets.

The report, in which the committee said it has been able so far only to "scratch the surface" of atomic spy activities in this country, recommended these legal actions:

1. Prosecution of Steve Nelson, Communist Party organizer in Pennsylvania, on charges of outright espionage, and citation of Nelson for contempt of Congress for refusing to answer committee questions.

2. Prosecution of Dr. Clarence F. Hiskey, his former wife, Marcia Sand Hiskey, and Dr. John H. Chapin on charges of conspiracy to commit espionage. Hiskey and Chapin were atomic bomb project scientists during the war.

"Scientist X" Mentioned

The committee accused the latter trio of conspiring with one Arthur Adams to pass along to Adams secret information on their work in New York and Chicago on development of explosive derivatives of uranium. The report identified Adams as an active spy for Moscow and said he is presumed now to be in Russia.

Although it called for Dr. Chapin's prosecution along with the others, it called him a cooperative witness and recorded his denial that he ever gave Adams any secrets.

The proposed prosecutions would be under the 1917 Espionage Act, which provides a maximum penalty of death or up to 30 years' imprisonment.

The committee also said a mysterious "scientist" should "either be prosecuted forthwith or cleared." That is a separate West Coast case.

May Ask Perjury Charges

It added that it may ask later for perjury charges against three witnesses heard in recent weeks.

"The failure to prosecute those who were engaged in this conspiracy is completely inexcusable," the report said. "It is humiliating to any American to realize that our neighbors to the north detected, arrested, tried, convicted and imprisoned the members of the Soviet espionage ring in Canada within less than one year's time, whereas the authorities in Washington have done absolutely nothing in the period of three years since the Canadian case broke.

"This failure of our Government to act is particularly difficult to justify in the light of testimony presented to the committee which clearly established that a complete report as to these espionage activities in the United States was made to the President over five years ago, and has been in the hands of the Justice Department since that time."

The report also said Dr. Martin D. Kamen, now a professor at Washington University in St. Louis, "very definitely gave classified information" to a Russian consulate official in San Francisco in 1944. Kamen "concedes that what he did constituted a gross indiscretion," the report said, adding:

"Whether that was all it was, or whether it constituted something more than that, the committee is not prepared at this time to say."

The Kamen affair was reported as separate from the Hiskey-Chapin and "Scientist X" matters, although the committee declared it was pursuing leads which indi-

Alger Hiss Sues Chambers On Red Charge

Former State Dept. Policy Maker Asks $50,000 Damages

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Alger Hiss yesterday asked a Federal Court in Baltimore to make Whittaker Chambers pay him $50,000 for saying "Alger Hiss was a Communist and may be now."

Hiss is a former top-level State Department policy maker, now head of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Chambers is an acknowledged former Communist underground courier, now a senior editor of Time magazine.

Chambers identified Hiss to Congress as a member, in the '30s, of a Communist underground ring. Hiss denied the charge throughout lengthy hearings this summer before the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Hiss said he knew Chambers as a favor-seeking free-lance writer.

Libel and Slander Charged

Hiss sued Chambers for defamation, not on the basis of the congressional charges, but on the basis of Chambers' statements in a Washington WOL radio broadcast August 27.

A question to Chambers by Post Reporter Edward T. Folliard was the first one cited in Hiss' suit yesterday. Folliard had pointed out that Chambers' testimony in

Four UPW Officers Defy House Group

VA Unit Chairmen Refuse to Produce Lists of Members

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Four CIO United Public Workers officials today defied a House subcommittee's order to produce membership lists and records of the union branches they head.

The four, witnesses before a subcommittee hearing here, are branch chairmen of Veterans' Administration units within the UPW.

They were called as the House group, representing the Committee on Education and Labor, opened an investigation into alleged Communist infiltration of Local 555 of the Teachers Union, a UPW affiliate.

Irving G. McCann, committee counsel, said the investigators also are concerned with "to what extent the UPW, if it is Communist, has infiltrated into the Veterans' Administration."

The UPW branch chairmen who refused to obey the order to produce membership rosters and records were Alfred White, George J. Leech, Herman Epstein and Adele Kramer. They head UPW chapters in four New York City VA units.

Each said it would violate a labor union tradition of long standing to divulge the names of his fellow union members at a public inquiry.

Leech, however, told the investi-

Philadelphia Racket Trial

Had to Join Union Before He Could Unload, Farmer Says

Philadelphia, Sept. 27 (AP).—James W. Hughes, a farmer of Bamberg, S. C., today testified he was forced to join a union before he could unload a truckful of cucumbers here.

Hughes testified as a Government witness in the fifth day of the conspiracy trial of three individuals and three organizations in United States District Court. The trial is the result of a Department of Justice investigation into conditions in the produce market here.

Hughes related how two men who identified themselves as union delegates interfered with his unloading cucumbers at a Dock street establishment. Hughes said that when he refused to join the union and threatened to drive his cargo to New York, the men threatened to slash his truck tires.

Asked by Curtis Shears, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, if he had joined the union, Hughes answered:

"I guess I did. I was allowed to unload my truck."

He added that he had to pay $10 for a union man to help unload the truck in place of the boy he had brought with him.

A Dock street commission merchant told the jury of eight women and four men that he paid union dues of $29 apiece for the South Carolina farmer and some 40 others so they could unload at his place.

On trial are Harry (Turk) Daniels, Abraham Goldberg, Fred Schlein and the organizations—Local 929, Produce, Poultry, Fish and Oystermen Drivers and Helpers Union; Wholesale Fruit and Vegetable Dealers, Inc., and Perishable Fruit and Produce Haulers Association.

Illinois Gets Presidential Check Tomorrow

Dewey Aims Peace Plea At Russians

Also Reminds Rulers Americans Close Ranks After Fight And Unite in Crisis

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 27.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey tonight, in effect, appealed to the Russian people, over the heads of Stalin and Molotov, for a peaceful solution of the Berlin crisis. He had a message for the "rulers," too. It was this:

Americans close ranks after every campaign and present a united front in every crisis.

All day he pounded through Oregon and Washington, spreading pledges of rapid Western river power development to help wage the peace.

At Seattle tonight, he almost forgot to ride herd on President Truman and their recent Western rodeo. He called again for prayers that "calmness and wisdom and the firm hand of justice" may peacefully resolve the United Nations showdown.

Convinced Peoples Want Peace

Without mentioning Stalin, Molotov or the Russian people by name, he told the Seattle audience:

"Whatever some leaders may do, I am convinced that the peoples of all nations desire peace.

"My most devoted purpose is to spread this conviction among governments through the influence and example of our own unity and desire for peace."

Returning to the Oregon setting of his May 21 primary conquest, then driving northwest into Washington, he spelled out at nearly every stop his idea of "home rule" in river valley de-

Truman Mocks Dewey for His Lofty Talks

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Bonham, Tex., Sept. 27.—President Truman took a come-out-and-fight stance today and mocked Gov. Thomas E. Dewey for his "high-level" talks about "home and mother" and "unity."

He said it was a smoke screen to cover up a Republican "surrender" to the lobbies and selfish interests. He said also that it was a "lullaby" to put American voters to sleep.

The Chief Executive, barnstorming through Texas, charged that Governor Dewey was "under an obligation" to Joseph R. Grundy, high tariff advocate of Pennsylvania. He was referring to the fact that the Grundy faction of the GOP threw its strength to Dewey at Philadelphia when the New Yorker was battling for the Presidential nomination.

Journey Is Triumphal

Mr. Truman's journey through the heart of the Lone Star State today was a triumphal one. The crowds were big and friendly all along the line. At one point, Waco, a young Dixiecrat waved a Confederate flag, and a few booed when Mr. Truman shook hands with a Negro woman schoolteacher.

In Dallas, however, the authorities did away with segregation for the day, and Negroes and whites

Wac Defends Servicewomen From 'Camp Follower' Slurs

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's wartime secretary, driver and aide said today some Army wives "made it quite clear—crystal-clear—they regarded any uniformed female overseas as a mere 'camp follower.'"

Wac Capt. Kay Summersby, beginning her memoirs in Look magazine, defended American women in the military service as hard-working, conscientious and as frequently living in discomfort and actual peril.

"Being human, I was even more upset at learning that my own reputation was lost," Captain Summersby said. "I traveled with the high brass. Therefore, I was a 'bad woman.'"

The Irish-born, dark-haired Wac first met Eisenhower, then a major general, when she was assigned with a number of other British girls to drive American Army officers in blitzed London in May, 1942.

She served as his driver and guide on his first short stay. When he returned as commander of the European Theater of Operations, she was permanently assigned to his personal staff, becoming a member of the general's four-member "official family."

furiously and was a chain smoker, she says, and probably worked harder and longer than any one under his command.

He was inclined to high blood pressure and neuritis bothered his shoulder, but was so afraid he would be ordered to a hospital that he "slipped down to London Clinic" for injection treatments rather than go to Army doctors.

Russia Alone to Blame if War Should Come, Bevin Tells U.N., Accuses Soviet of Duplicity

West's Protest On Blockade of Berlin May Go To Council Today

By Walter Kerr

Paris, Sept. 27 (NYHT).—The three Western powers worked this afternoon on the text of their appeal to the Security Council of the United Nations and their complaint that Soviet action in the Berlin crisis constitutes a threat to international peace and security.

By nightfall the document was in its final stages and it is possible it will be ready for transmission Tuesday, thus opening the way for Security Council action before the end of the week.

The decision to turn to the United Nations was taken yesterday by George C. Marshall, American Secretary of State; Ernest Bevin, British Foreign Secretary, and Robert Schuman, French Foreign Minister, following study of the latest communication that had been received from Moscow.

Further secret negotiation with the Soviet government appeared futile when the Russians not only rejected the Western demand that the food blockade of Berlin be lifted as a condition for continued discussion but demanded instead Russian control of air communications into the former German capital.

On this basis the West broke off talks that have been held since July 30 and in a statement throwing responsibility on the Kremlin the United States, Great Britain and France announced they were appealing to the Security Council.

Notes to this effect were handed to the Soviet ambassadors in Washington, London and Paris at the same time the United States Government published an exhaustive "white paper" describing the efforts that had been made to reach an understanding and revealing the documents in the case. The British Government prepared a similar publication.

The news came not as a surprise but as a considerable shock just the same to many delegates of the United Nations now meeting in Paris. The Russians said nothing but it was reported that Georgi Zarubin, Soviet Ambassador in London, was flying here Tuesday.

Today's drafting was done by the so-called standing committee of the Western powers, consisting of Lewis W. Douglas, American Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, Rene Massigli, French Ambassador to Great Britain, and Sir William Strang of the British Foreign Office. The document they produce will be sent either to Trygve Lie, secretary general of the United Nations, or to Sir Alexander Cadogan, British delegate and at present president of the Security Council.

Sir Alexander was returning to Paris this evening from Stockholm where he attended funeral services for Count Folke Bernadotte, United Nations Palestine mediator, who was murdered by terrorists in Jerusalem 10 days ago. After conferring with Bevin he is expected to step down from the presidency, since his government is joining in the complaint. There is normally a three-day delay be-

Assembly May Get Appeal; Truman Sees Envoy to Russia

Smith Says Crisis Doesn't Mean War

Bonham, Tex., Sept. 27 (AP).—Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith conferred with President Truman tonight and said relations with Russia are very "critical" but not on the verge of war.

Smith told reporters conditions at no time since the war have been more critical.

Asked whether that means we are going to war, Smith replied: "That's too deep for me to answer. But I'll modify critical and say serious. I don't by 'critical' mean we are trembling on the verge of war."

"If our present policy of firmness, patience and determination is followed you don't necessarily have to face the ultimate."

Smith flew to Texas from Washington to confer with the Chief Executive for some 3½ hours while Mr. Truman's campaign train was rolling from Dallas to Bonham.

The President relayed word to reporters that Smith gave him a "complete and valuable" fill-in on the crisis in Berlin.

Smith said he last saw the Premier about two weeks ago. "He looked extremely well." He said Stalin is a little older, of course, but "quite vigorous and alert."

Recourse to Full U. N. On Berlin Possible

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

Recourse to the General Assembly of the United Nations is likely, it was learned yesterday, in case a Soviet veto prevents the Security Council from acting on the Berlin blockade.

The decision to go to the Security Council was by no means the last move by the three western allies, according to responsible authorities here.

Under the rules of procedure of the 58-nation Assembly, its steering committee could decide to put the Berlin issue on the agenda at any time during the present 10 or 12 weeks' session in Paris.

This would be subject to three conditions: (1) that the Berlin blockada be regarded as a matter of "urgency"—which, of course, it is; (2) that two-thirds of the voting members of the Assembly agree to put it on the agenda, and (3) that the Security Council clears the Berlin issue from its dockets of cases.

There is plenty of confidence here that all three conditions can be met if necessary. And there is every prospect that even the inevitable Soviet veto or vetoes in

World Bank Chiefs Weigh Program Delay

Effects of Unrest Discussed by Cripps, Truman, Wang Yun-wu

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The extent to which the world's recovery from World War II has been delayed by the ever-recurring international crises was emphasized at the first plenary session of the third annual meeting of the governors of the International Bank and of the International Monetary Fund yesterday.

A message from President Truman, read to the meeting by Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, made mention of it. Minister Wang Yun-wu, chairman of the boards of governors of both the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and of the Monetary Fund, emphasized it. So did Sir Stafford Cripps, governor for the United Kingdom.

Truman Cites Progress

"Two years ago," Mr. Truman's message read, "when the board of governors met in Washington, the Fund and the Bank had completed the organizational phase of their work, but were just about to start active operations.

"In this period of time the fund and the bank have made notable progress toward attaining their objectives, although they have operated under conditions which were not entirely favorable to their realization. This makes their achievements even greater. But much remains to be done.

"Conditions of world finance are still far from the norm envisaged at the Bretton Woods Conference. It was true then as it is now, that conditions of economic stability and prosperity throughout the Britain Urges Bernadotte's Plan in U. N.

Wide Backing Shown In Survey by U. S.; Arabs Oppose Action

Paris, Sept. 27 (AP).—British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin today called on the United Nations to approve speedily Count Folke Bernadotte's Palestine peace plan. He termed it the "best hope for healing the breach" between the Arabs and the Jews.

Spokesmen for the Arab nations expressed opposition to any imposition of a Palestine settlement by force. Sir Mohammed Zafrullah Khan, Foreign Minister for Pakistan, assailed Israel as a "cancer" in the Middle East that must be removed.

Bevin opened Britain's policy declaration to the 58-nation Assembly with a review of the Holy Land situation. He noted that the United States and France also are backing the plan put forward by the assassinated U. N. mediator. The Arabs oppose it and the Jews have criticized some parts.

"We (the British) have to support Count Bernadotte's plan in its entirety and we would urge speed in dealing with it," he said.

As Bevin spoke an informed source said an American poll of many U. N. delegates showed a wide basis of support for the Bernadotte plan.

The poll was understood to have taken into account such major issues in the plan as these:

Arab acceptance of the state of Israel, Arab insistence on the right of Arab refugees to return to their homes in Jewish territory, Arab agreement on giving western Galilee to Israel, Jewish agreement to give the Negev to the Arabs, the internationalization of Jerusalem, the political future of the Arab section of Palestine, and the Jewish

GAR Forms Ranks for What May Become Last Session

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 27 (U.P.).—The steadily shrinking ranks of the Grand Army of the Republic formed today for the formal opening of what may be the GAR's last national encampment.

Attended by physicians and nurses, six tired old soldiers were on hand for the eighty-second annual meeting. Their ages range from 99 to 107. Four were in wheel chairs.

Their vision was dim and their hearing impaired, but the spirits of the Union veterans appeared to be high.

They seemed to enjoy mingling with members of the Marine Corps Band, although their faded blue uniforms couldn't compare with those of the marines.

The half-dozen aged men are among 28 living members of the organization. Federal pension rolls list 15 other Union veterans who are not members.

A movement to disband the GAR and turn its records over to a Government agency got under way, spearheaded by John Hard, 107, Rochester, N. Y., the oldest member attending.

"I think this should be our last meeting," Hard said, "there are just too few of us left to make any more worth while."

The youngest member at the encampment, Senior Vice Commander James Penland, 99, Portland, Oreg., said he thought "this one is the end."

Three others in the group, which had a peak membership of 450,000 before the turn of the century said they favored continuing the encampments "until the last man is gone."

They were Albert Woolson, 101, Minneapolis; John Grate, 103, Atwater, Ohio, a past commander, and William H. Osborn, 104, Joplin, Mo., national patriotic instructor.

Charles L. Chappel, 101, Long Beach, Calif., said he wanted to "talk it over with the boys before I make up my mind about any more meetings."

Ridicules Latest Arms Proposals, Asks What Goes On Behind 'Curtain'

By John G. Rogers

Paris, Sept. 27 (NYHT).—Great Britain told the United Nations General Assembly today that Russia's latest disarmament proposals must be regarded with suspicion, and that if the West cannot persuade Russia into real U. N. cooperation, then the West must postpone the U. N. ideal and stake its security on regional arrangements.

In what was probably the toughest speech in the history of the so-called cold war, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin accused the Soviets of duplicity, sabotage and warmongering, and he added:

"If the black fury, the incalculable disaster of the atomic war should fall upon us, all I can say is that one power (Russia), by refusing its cooperation in the control and development of those great new forces for the good of mankind, will alone be responsible for the evils which may be visited upon mankind."

What's Behind Curtain?

Before the delegates of the 58 U. N. countries massed in the Palais de Chaillot, Secretary Bevin cited the disarmament proposals made from the same rostrum on Saturday by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky.

Then he asked, "What person can say what is happening inside the Soviet Union? Have we got to put our security in the pool with a nation which will not, and is determined not to, reveal to the world what it is doing?

"This looks to me like a proposal to the Assembly to disarm the rest of the world while the Soviet Union maintains secrecy about their own military strength. It is not a situation conducive to confidence or to collective security."

After noting that Britain's war recovery still has far to go, and yet that Britain has recently been forced to curtail that recovery to go back to a revived preparedness program, Bevin said that perhaps the U.N.'s idealists have set their hopes too high.

Better to Realize It Now

If so, he asserted, it is better to realize this now than to live in a fool's paradise; it is better to postpone the U.N. ideal and strike regional arrangements that will promise security.

"We must agree with whom we can agree," he said. "We must work with those whom we can work with; understand and trust those who are willing to enter into trust and understanding with us."

As the parade of Assembly opening debate flowed on today, with acute political crisis by far the dominating theme of the speeches, Dr. Charles Malik of Lebanon presented a long address which struck wistfully at the conscience of more than one delegate.

Dr. Malik, who is president of the U. N. Economic and Social Council, and chairman of the Assembly's social committee, didn't mention politics once, except to decry its dominant monopoly on U. N. minds.

A respected world definition of the proper worth and dignity of man, wherever he lives, is an issue that must be settled, Dr. Malik said. Until that is settled, he continued, there is no hope of settling properly such questions as Palestine, Korea, Germany and atomic energy.

With the whole U. N. in a tense state over submission of the Berlin question to the Security Council, Bevin charged that Russia is the aggressor in the cold war, and he said that if Russia wants to change her ways, she must do it with deeds, not with words from Vishinsky.

Instead of proposing disarmament out of a blue sky, Bevin admonished, let Vishinsky pull aside the iron curtain and disclose the strength of Soviet armed forces.

And, he continued, let Vishinsky go down to the heart of the matter and tell the West whether the Stalinists actually live by a Marxist-Lenin credo which holds that the Soviet republics can never live permanently in peace with non-Communist countries.

If Moscow is worried about an attack from the West, Bevin said, Moscow can set its fears at rest for such an attack is not and never

England Divided on Opinions of Bevin, However He Still Roars Out His Views

All of Great Britain is divided into two parts: Those who swear by "Ernie" Bevin and those who swear at him.

That's bloody well all right with the ham-fisted, bull-headed 240-pound Ernie, who rears out his own opinions in unmistakable terms whenever and whatever the occasion, just as he did yesterday before the United Nations.

No, Ernie doesn't mince words. He may be—and in fact, he is—Britain's Foreign Secretary, but he can't be—and in fact, he isn't—a diplomat.

Ernie was hauling ginger-beer at $8 a week, when he took his first whack at politics, running for city council. When a rival candidate in a public speech had some uncomplimentary things to say about the truculent teamster, Ernie got mad and heaved his opponent into the Avon River.

Of course, Ernie's not quite that pugnacious these days. As a Minister of State must necessarily constrain himself to verbal wallops and boots. But even orally, he throws his punches at the nose, aims his kicks at the seat of the pants—be they the nose or pants of Molotov, Vishinsky, Truman, Churchill, or who have you.

Blunt, beefy Ernest Bevin prepared for international statesmanship by hammer-sledging his way to the top of labor. He organized and amalgamated 20 unions in transportation, steel, chemicals, engineering works, chemical plants, and by 1922 at the age of 41 was already a labor boss, autocratic and popular with his workers in the manner of John L. Lewis.

When Churchill was called to head Britain's war government, he in turn called in Bevin, his political foe of 30 years to be Labor Minister. "The ablest figure in British industry," Churchill called Ernie.

Furthermore, Ernie had been British labor's thunderer against appeasement. Three years before the shame of Munich Bevin brutally deposed from leadership of the Labor Party the gentle, pacifist George Lansbury. "We must break with leaders who hawk their consciences around on their sleeves," Bevin demanded.

As wartime Labor Minister, Ernie was in effect dictator over the workaday lives of some 33 million men and women. He froze jobs, banned strikes, and exhorted all workers to "Give 'itler 'ell."

When the Labor Party swept into power in 1945, Ernie expected to be made Chancellor of the Exchequer, and said so. But with the Potsdam Conference in suspension awaiting a successor to Churchill it was decided that a strong man like Bevin was needed to back up soft-speaking Prime Minister Clement Attlee.

At 67, even after three years at 10 Downing St., Ernie Bevin still prefers the bludgeon to the rapier of diplomacy, as when he accused President Truman of playing domestic politics with the Palestine issue.

Bevin's formal education stopped at age of 11. Nonetheless he attained through reading an enormous grasp of history, economics, finance, international affairs and Dickens. He likes to say he has the memory of an elephant; his critics say that like an elephant he never forgets those who've ever offended him.

Ernie murders the King's English. He swallows his starting aitches, and drops his final g's. He hurls invective left and right. He rarely completes a sentence. But you always know what he means.

Marshall Congratulates Bevin on Speech will be contemplated. Then he added:

"On the other hand, if, having secured Soviet territory, they (the Russians) then use the territory of other states to prepare attacks on us, then a very difficult situation is created, in which we can only look to our own defense."

The five western union countries, Bevin pledged, are bound together for defense, not for aggression. And as for Russian condemnations of the Marshall Plan, condemnations which are echoed by the Slav satellites, Bevin said that the satellites stayed out of the plan because Russia so ordered, and not for any other reason.

Would Be First to Applaud

The British Foreign Secretary, whose address received the loudest round of delegate applause of the Assembly to date, said in another aside to Vishinsky:

"If he or his government had any feeling for the simple people of Europe, if they were animated by anything but an out-of-date, backward, unscientific doctrine, they would be the first to applaud the great and unselfish contribution of the United States to world recovery."

A number of other countries took part in the general debate today:

Dr. Malik of Lebanon, in his long address on United Nations economic and social programs, disclosed that he will later propose a 5-point program to improve the work of the Economic and Social Council.

His program would encourage the Council to make arrangements to deal properly with its ever-increasing agenda, to make more social and cultural studies, to extend the cultural activities. It also would propose more joint work with the Security Council, and provide new finance to take care of increased work.

Main Holding Force

New Zealand's speaker, James Thorn, recognized all that was wrong with the U. N., but he asked the countries nevertheless to take a vital and positive atitude toward the organization. Here, he quoted words from the annual report of U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie—"the United Nations has become the chief force that holds the world together against all the conflicting strains and stresses that are pulling it apart."

In the balance of his speech, instead of decrying U. N.'s shortcomings or viewing with alarm the world political situation, Thorn gave a high-spot review of U. N. work in social, economic, scientific and cultural fields.

Henry G. Cooperin, Liberian Minister to France, spoke the typical and justified lament of a small country. He wondered whether the big powers were aware of the fine words and promises in the U. N. Charter. What, he asked, can a little country plan for or count on when an atomic war of giants is not impossible in the future?

Hector David Castro of El Salvador defended the Russian-disputed right of the Assembly to admit new members to the U. N., even if the application of the applicant states had previously been voted in the Security Council.

Urges Action by Hyderabad

Pakistan's Foreign Minister, Sir Mohammed Zafrullah Khan, called on the Indian princely state of Hyderabad to demand that U. N. observers be sent there to assess the situation since Hyderabad capitulated militarily to India. He accused India of keeping tight censorship over events.

The Pakistan diplomat had tough words for the Jewish state of Israel which, he said, was created as "the culmination of a course of the most invidious aggression in recent history."

Czechoslovakia's Foreign Minister, Dr. Vladimir Clements, denied Bevin's assertion that eastern European nations were forbidden to enter the Marshall Plan. He said they stayed out because it was to their interests to stay out. Dr. Clementis praised the Russian disarmament proposals and asked how anyone could oppose them.

Reds Say Bevin Tries To Veil Rejection

London, Sept. 27 (AP).—Moscow radio tonight described Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin's speech before the United Nations as "an attempt to veil his rejection of Soviet proposals for peace and security."

There was no mention of the western powers' plan to take the Berlin dispute to the Security Council.

tween time of filing an appeal and Security Council action, which would postpone proceedings until Friday if the drafting committee finishes its assignment Tuesday night.

It is the intention of the Western powers to state their case without recommending a specific solution, leaving a final decision up to the Council whether in the end this brings a Soviet veto. The objective is to maintain flexibility, though the complaint is based on Chapter VII of the Charter.

The first part of this chapter is article 39, which says:

"The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to peace, breach of the peace or act of aggression and shall make recommendations or decide what measure shall be taken in accordance with articles 41 and 42 to maintain or restore international order."

Article 41 refers to measures not involving the use of armed force, including the interruption of economic and diplomatic relations. Article 42 authorizes military action. In all substantive matters, however, the veto applies.

Use of Force Charged

It was reported last night that the three powers intend to argue that through the Berlin blockade and strong-arm methods in the city the Soviet Government has applied force in international relations, thereby violating its obligations under the Charter.

The Soviet delegation, headed by Andrei I. Vishinsky, Deputy Foreign Minister, may fight the case in the Security Council, walk out of the proceedings or go to the extent of withdrawing from the United Nations.

All these possibilities have been examined by the Western governments. They feel the situation is dangerous enough to warrant the risks involved.

Having made the decision they reached yesterday, they found it unnecessary to meet today. Bevin did not refer to those latest developments in his address to the General Assembly.

India Ponders Republic Status

New Delhi, India, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—India may declare herself a republic before the end of the year.

Reliable sources reported today that Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru had been authorized to propose at the British Commonwealth Conference in London in October that India retain certain links with Britain while officially proclaiming herself a republic. India, which gained its independence last year, is now a dominion in the British Commonwealth.

Russians Arrest Four Americans

Hof, Germany, Sept. 27 (AP).—Four members of an American constabulary unit were arrested by Soviet border guards today after crossing the Russian zonal boundary.

Gerald Teran, military government spokesman, said the men have not been returned.

Police who witnessed the arrest said the Americans apparently had overlooked a sign warning that the border was closed.

Today's arrests boosted to 12 the number of constabulary troopers nabbed by the Russians in the past week along the American-Soviet zonal frontier.

Navy Plans Sinking Radioactive Ships

The Navy announced yesterday it will sink two radioactive warships during amphibious training operations of Southern California on October 5.

The doomed ships are the submarine Skate and the attack transport Crittenden which were used in the Bikini atom bomb tests.

The Navy said it will dispose of them in line with its policy of sinking Bikini target ships which cannot be economically scrapped or repaired.

LeMay Says Reds Haven't Curbed Airlift

Wiesbaden, Germany, Sept. 27 (AP).—The United States air chief in Europe indicated today he isn't worried about the Russians trying to stop the Berlin air lift.

Lieut. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, the Air Force commander who soon will head the American Strategic Air Command, refused to speculate whether Russian "nuisance tactics" might increase as a result of the worsening Berlin situation.

"The Russians have the same policy toward us as they do toward the State Department" LeMay told a farewell news conference. "They make a nuisance of themselves and try to discourage our efforts. But they are simply harassing tactics and have not bothered us at all.

"If they should go further and use force in an attempt to stop the air lift, our action then would be a decision for our Government."

The air lift sent 623 planes of food and fuel into Berlin today.

British Parliament To Open Formally

London, Sept. 27 (AP).—King George sent word to the boys at the Tower of London today to dust off the imperial crown. He's going to wear it for the first time in 10 years at the opening of Parliament October 26.

The decision for a full ceremonial apparently was taken with government consent in answer to a campaign to get the country back to normal peacetime proceedings.

This means all the lords and ladies must put on their ceremonial robes which have been in moth balls since before the war.

Two Iraq Ministers Resign From Posts

Baghdad, Iraq, Sept. 27 (AP).—Resignations of Iraq's defense minister and of her Ambassador to Washington were announced today by the government.

No reason was given for the resignation of Sadi Albassan, appointed defense minister June 26.

It was said Ali Jawdt Alayubi, Iraqui Ambassador to Washington who has been in Baghdad for the last several months, resigned because of ill health.

Berlin Asks Big 4 To Agree or Leave

Changes Urged

New Soviet View on U. N. Published

Berlin, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—The Soviet-licensed Berliner Montag made public today a completely new Soviet view when it suggested reorganizaton of the U. N. The newspaper asked abandonment of the right of veto and substitution of majority rule.

"Although the United Nations was established on a base laid down in the Atlantic Charter, the Yalta agreement and the Potsdam decisions, there is no doubt that, in the meantime, political events have occurred which show reorganization of the United Nations would benefit all," the paper said.

Montag proposed that all nations become members of the international body and that each should have equal representation and equal vote.

"Then if the veto right is replaced by the democratic principle of majority much quicker success for world benefit should be obtained," is said.

The Berlinger Montag is subject to close Russian scrutiny and generally is believed to reflect Soviet policy. However, observers were surprised at the new view since the power of veto is a potent weapon in the hands of the East as well as the West.

Red Wildcat Strikes Spreading in Finland

Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—Wildcat strikes, inspired by Communists to demand wage increases, spread across Finland today.

The harbor of Turku, the biggest strike center, was tied up for the third day.

Two thousand employes of the Arabia China factory here walked out today and a strike by Turku electrical workers passed its third day.

Berlin, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Berlin city government told the quarreling occupation powers today they should get together on a Berlin settlement or all get out of the city and let the Germans run it.

Berliners looked to the United Nations as a last desperate chance for a peaceful settlement of the East-West dispute over the blockaded city, but most people felt there was little hope.

The German press was almost unanimously pessimistic that the U. N. could succeed where direct negotiations had failed. The Communist press claimed Berlin was none of the United Nations' business and warned its intervention might wreck the world peace organization.

Amid the speculation following the breakdown in East-West negotiations two things seemed immediately certain:

1. The airlift supplying Berlin's western sectors over the Soviet ground blockade will be expanded as much as necessary to meet the needs of approaching winter.

2. The building of a western German government in the British, French and American occupation zones will be speeded as a counterthrust against the growing Soviet pressure on Germany.

A resolution drafted by the executive branch of the Socialist-dominated city government contained the suggestion that the Germans be given full responsibility for the city government.

But the resolution also asked that "so long as the occupation of Germany continues" and Berlin remains under four-power control "no one power have any more influence in Berlin than any other."

This was a direct slap at the Russians, who have been seeking to overthrow the legally elected government and achieve full Communist control of the city.

Some Hope Held in U. N.

The resolution regretted that direct negotiations on a Berlin settlement had failed, but added "we see in the approach of the three Western powers to the United Nations still one possibility to settle the difficulties of Berlin through the organs of peaceful peoples."

The part dealing with giving responsibility to the Germans said:

"Since it is difficult to bring about a permanent and definite solution of the Berlin crisis on an international basis, we address to the occupying powers and to the world the urgent call to withdraw—within the framework of the general termination of the occupation of Germany—all occupation troops also from Berlin.

"Only the transfer of full responsibility for political and economic life to the democratic representatives of the German nation can lead to a situation which will prevent any repetition of the present crisis."

If this is not possible, the resolution added, it would be desirable that the occupation forces be limited to carrying out immediate military tasks and attempts halted at influencing German governmental matters.

Battleship Iowa Bound for 'Mothball Fleet'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

IN DRYDOCK—The 45,000-ton U. S. S. Iowa leaves little spare room in the drydock at the San Francisco Naval shipyard where crew and workmen prepare her to join the "mothball fleet." Compartments are being sealed and dehumidification processes set up. The job will be done in January, after which the ship will be tied up as part of Pacific reserve fleet

Case May Go Into Assembly

the Security Council will not stop the western allies from their expressed intention to marshal world opinion against Russia on the Berlin issue.

The Assembly can only "recommend" action, but it can pass a resolution of censure, and it can also send commissions of its own which have had a pacifying effect in Greece and Korea. In the case of Palestine, the Assembly's votes led to the appointment of the late Count Folke Bernadotte as mediator.

It appeared more than ever probable yesterday that the western powers would bring their case to the Security Council without delay under Article 39 of Chapter VIII. This article provides that "the Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression," and shall decide what measures shall be taken "to maintain or restore international peace and amity."

Serious Possibilities

Two "very serious" possibilities were being canvassed in responsible quarters here after the breaking off of direct negotiations with the Russians.

One was a possible withdrawal of Russia and her satellites from the United Nations—a much more serious step than a mere "walkout" of the kind Andrei Gromyko staged when he stalked out of the Security Council during the Iran dispute in 1946.

Such a withdrawal, it was felt here, would not only be deadly for the United Nations but dangerous and stupid for Russia, for it would inevitably give the remainder of the U. N. the aspect of a military alliance against the Soviet Union. For this reason a Soviet withdrawal was considered possible but not at all likely.

The second "very serious" possibility is that the Russians might force an American or British plane down, in accordance with their new claim to control the air corridors leading to Berlin. To force a plane down, even without shooting at it, would be regarded here as a deliberate act against American forces, and would lead to the gravest kind of incident.

But on this danger, as on the other, the weight of opinion here yesterday was that the Russians would not go so far. They have shown remarkable restraint so far in avoiding incidents over the airlift; this was the belief of Allied officials in Berlin in July, when the airlift was new, and it is their belief still.

Quick Showdown Unlikely

Soviet tactics before and since the war have shown that the Russians will push just as far as they think they can go without actually bringing on a military reprisal. The only exception since the Bolshevist revolution was the Soviet attack on Finland in 1939, which was based on misinformation and was soon regretted by those who had ordered it.

The consensus of informed opinion yesterday, therefore, was that the Berlin crisis probably would not come to any dramatic "showdown" quickly, but would drag on for weeks in the form of public debate in Paris.

The airlift will go on through the bad weather, probably at the accidental price of some American and British planes and pilots' lives, keeping the necessities of life supplied to Berlin, and giving more time for reaching a settlement.

ECA Allots 1.9 Millions To Netherlands, Greece

The Economic Cooperation Administration yesterday authorized an additional $1,909,506 in recovery funds for two European nations.

The allotments bring to $1,826,510,285 the total now authorized for all participating countries in the Marshall Plan.

The Netherlands will receive $1,649,156 in cotton fabric from Japan, and Greece receives $260,000 in army-type pyramidal tents from the United States.

Under Treaty

West Union Officials Plan Co-Defense

By Ned Russell

Paris, Sept. 27 (NYHT).—The Defense Ministers of the five-power Western Union met today to coordinate their defense policies in event of war.

The ministers met twice today. These meetings were the latest in a series of conferences which have been held against the background of increasing danger of war in Europe.

Today, the atmosphere of danger was greater than it has been at any time since the end of the second World War. It was intensified with the decision last night of the United Sates, Great Britain and France to accuse Russia before the United Nations Security Council of threatening peace in the blockade of Berlin.

Although the timing of today's meetings with the breaking-off of the four-power talks on Berlin appeared to add to the gravity of the situation, the meetings had been planned long before the Berlin crisis became acute. The Defense Ministers are supposed to meet every three months under the terms of the Treaty of Brussels.

Today's meetings were attended by A. V. Alexander of Britain, Paul Ramadier of France, Lieut. Col. Raul de Fraiteur of Belgium, W. E. H. Schokking of the Netherlands, and Lambert Schaus of Luxembourg.

The meetings were secret, but it was understood that the ministers dealt primarily with reports from their permanent military committee which sits in London.

Catholic Church Directs Syracuse Catacombs

Syracuse, Sicily, Sept. 26. (delayed) (U.P.).—The Catholic Church today resumed possession of the catacombs of Syracuse in which its members lived in the first centuries of worship and martyrdom.

With the signing of a note between the Italian government and Vatican City, the catacombs, until now administered by the department of antiquities and fine arts, will be controlled by the Pontifical Commission of Sacred Archeology.

Russians Map 'Impossible' Airlift Rules

Berlin, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—The Russians have drafted a set of air rules that would ban all but an occasional flight by a western plane into Berlin and insist these rules now govern all flights, reliable sources said today.

These sources added that the American, British and French military governments flatly rejected the regulations.

The rules have been filed with the Four-Power Air Safety Center here and would ban all instrument flights, day or night. They would give the Russians the right to turn back any plane seeking to land at Templehof Airport which is in the United States zone and is operated by the United States Army.

"You can sum up the Soviet regulations in seven words," a high American source said. "They would make the airlift impossible."

Observers added the regulations show what the West could expect if it agreed to the Soviet demand for control of all air corridors to Berlin.

Here is what informed sources said the rejected regulations provide:

1. "Night flights along air corridors are categorically forbidden." This would knock out between 50 and 60 per cent of the planes now supplying 2,500,000 Berlin Germans with food, coal, drugs and fuel for vital public services.

2. "Flight through dense clouds is forbidden." This would stop from 30 to 50 per cent of the daytime traffic on the basis of the weather which has prevailed since the airlift over the Russian blockade began in mid-June.

3. "Flights over various national sectors of greater Berlin will be made only on permission of the appropriate command." Since traffic patterns for all landings and takeoffs at Templehof have to cross the Soviet sector, Russia could "veto" every plane coming into or leaving the principal terminus of the airlift.

Romania Aide In Turkey Dies; Food Blamed

Ankara, Turkey, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—A Romanian Embassy spokesman said tonight the Romanian Ambassador Grigor Moisil died today of "food poisoning."

This report came a few hours after Turkish government sources said that Moisil had decided to abandon his post, become a political refugee and move to Switzerland to teach mathematics at a university.

A Romanian Embassy spokesman who described himself as Moisil's secretary said by phone that Moisil died "after eating poison mushrooms." He said the body would be sent to Bucharest.

Moisil's reported decision to quit his post had puzzled observers here because he was known as a "good" Communist and for that reason was hated by other Romanian refugees.

6 Injured as Reds Battle Gaullists

Le Havre, France, Sept. 27 (AP).—Communists and followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle clashed in the streets of Le Havre today. Six persons were injured, three on each side.

The port was tied up by a Communist-called 24-hour strike, affecting 20,000 workers. About 600 Communists marched through the streets with an effigy of De Gaulle which they said they were going to throw into the harbor.

De Gaullists managed to seize the effigy and destroy it. The fight broke up before police arrived.

Arms Production Soaring Anew

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 27 (AP).—Production of M-1 firles for infantry and M-3 machines guns for jet planes is being stepped up to record proportions at the big Springfield Armory, Army officials revealed today.

Home from an important ordnance conference in Washington, Col. Morris K. Barroll, commandant, sounded a call for 200 additional employes—machine operators, carpenters, laborers.

The plant already is working overtime on a six-day week schedule with 2600 employes following recent additions of approximately 1000 workers.

Delay in Bank's Program Discussed

world depend upon the cooperative effort of all nations. Action is needed by individual countries as well as by international organizations which can operate only in the atmosphere created by the policies of the member governments.

"We can look forward to an increasingly important role for the Fund and the Bank in coming years. I trust that the present meetings of the governors will give renewed impetus to economic cooperation in the financial sphere."

Sir Stafford Cripps said:

"There is little doubt that the international and economic picture of the world today is not what had been anticipated by the creators of these institutions—the Fund and the Bank—at Bretton Woods.

"This change of circumstances has created great difficulties for both institutions, since the stresses and strains of the international situation are, we hope, quite abnormal and there has been no period of peaceful development during which these policies and practices could be fostered.

"We must not because of these unfortunate accidents of history underestimate the importance either of their creation—a rightful impulse of the postwar urge for the self-preservation of humanity—or of their continuing and developing existence.

"Though our hopes and expectations may have been postponed by the course of events, we must not allow ourselves to be discouraged or to feel that we shall forever be struggling in the coils of adversity so that no orderly and considered plans for world economic cooperation can succeed.

"Though the resources of the Bank are not adequate to deal with the Herculean task of world reconstruction as it now presents itself to us, it has yet been able to do some most useful service in this direction. Valuable help has already been given and more channels of assistance are now under examination."

Wang Yun-wu Speaks

Wang Yun-wu declared "as we meet today economic and financial difficulties beset many nations.

"It is a melancholy reflection that one does not speak of peace and that the blessings of peace are, indeed, still denied to the world."

Much of Chairman Wang's address dealt with the critical situation in the Far East and Asia.

"China is still in the throes of grave political and economic difficulties," he said, "and great efforts are still needed to reach a reasonable degree of stability and prosperity.

"We in China feel that our own unfortunate experiences may give us a keener and more profound realization of many world problems than we would otherwise have.

"We can appreciate both the aspirations and the difficulties of countries suffering from the destruction of war and enemy occupation. We can also sympathize with the countries which feel that the yhave not in the past received an adequate share of the world's material goods and which are determined that their people shall in the future enjoy higher standards of living."

Praises Marshall Plan

The existence of the Marshall Plan for economic cooperation, Wang declared, "provides us with the basis for confidence in the future."

"Were it not for the aid extended by the United States, many of us would now be measuring the rate of deterioration of our economies, instead of measuring, as we may do now, the rate of recovery."

Were it not, he said, for "ERP and the promise it holds out for the future, as well as the aid already given, instead of our coming together here to cooperate in achieving a more prosperous and stable world economy, the various countries of the world would have probably been engaged in desperate efforts to prevent utter ruin."

Wang also praised the contributions of Canada to world stability. "The Canadian people, seemingly not to be outdone by their Southern neighbors, have, on a population basis, given aid in the same magnitude as the United States."

"Poor to Start With"

In his plea for more aid for the Far East, Wang declared: "Our areas were poor to start with. We had little that we could afford to lose, and yet we lost a great deal."

He also asked that more "be done for the further industrialization of the less developed economies in Latin America, the Middle East and elsewhere."

The Finnish delegate, Sakari Tuomioja, welcomed the "splendid opportunity" to meet the governors from the other nations, and "establish friendships under the amiable atmosphere of this beautiful capital of the United States." He spoke of the two organizations being "based on the realization of the economic interdependence and organic unity of the world nations."

"This interrelationship is very deeply felt in Finland," he said, "whose economy and whose very national existence depend on the exchange of goods with other lands, near and far alike.

"Whatever the prevailing economic conditions in her customer countries, they always strongly influence Finland's domestic economic life."

He added that "recovery in Finland is slowly but steadily on its way despite tremendous difficulties of various kinds."

Referring to the Bank and Fund as "two beacons of economic progress and world unity," he said: "Finland is sincerely interested in all efforts designed to bring about economic stability and welfare all over the world."

The Canadian Finance Minister, D. C. Abbott, and a governor of the Bank told newsmen his country hopes soon to relax travel and import controls between Canada and the United States.

He expressed the hope that restrictions on the importation of fresh fruits and vegetables, which Canada was accustomed to import from this country in large quantity during the winter, will soon be lightened. He referred particularly to lettuce, tomatoes and cabbage, as well as other "basic fresh foods."

Abandoned Freighter A Million-Dollar Prize

Halifax, Nova Scotia, Sept. 27 (AP).—Two tugs have found the British freighter Leicester 900 miles southeast of Halifax and are towing her to Bermuda as a salvage prize, port authorities said today.

They estimated the abandoned ship to be worth a million dollars.

The Leicester was abandoned by her crew September 16 after being buffeted by a hurricane.

Fund Grants Czechs $6,000,000 Advance

An advance of six million dollars to Czechoslovakia, the first such credit granted in the Russian sphere, was announced by the International Monetary Fund yesterday.

Camille Gutt, managing director of the Fund, said the organization recently bought six million dollars worth of korunas (Czech currency), to help that country meet unusual dollar shortages caused by poor harvest last year.

In addition, President John J. McCloy of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, said the bank's directors are weighing a 10 million-dollar credit to finance the purchase by western European countries of timber from Poland, Finland, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Austria.

Reds Report Major Fight Near Madioen

Batavia, Java, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Communist radio reported today heavy fighting between Indonesian and Communist forces within 20 miles of Madioen, center of the Red-led revolt against the republic.

The report indicated this may be the main meeting between the Indonesian and Communist troops.

The radio broadcast said the fighting was taking place northwest of Madioen near Waliukun and Ngrambe and claimed the capture of part of an Indonesian division.

Indonesian sources here reported a rash of Communist uprisings in central and eastern Java, but said republican authorities were confident they could control them. One occurred at Wonosari, less than 40 miles southeast of Jogjakarta, the republican capital.

Another small scale rebellion flared at Kediri, 50 miles southeast of Madioen, but this was put under control, said Antara, the republican news agency.

Meanwhile, Musso, the Moscow-trained Communist leading the rebellion in Madioen, served notice he was carrying out Marxist policy in territory under his control.

The Madioen radio said private lands in the area had been seized for redistribution to the population.

Burma Communists Cut Rangoon-Mandalay Railway

Rangoon, Burma, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Burmese government announced today Communist insurgents have cut off rail services between Rangoon and Mandalay.

At the same time the government imposed a censorship on all outgoing foreign press cables from Burma.

A communique said the Communist cut the railway 450 miles north of Rangoon. A railway bridge was destroyed near the Communist stronghold of Pyinmana, central Burma.

Bridge repairs are under way, the government said. On a branch line, in the same area, Communists burned down two railway stations.

In a seven-hour battle between government forces and rebels near the Kyaukpadaung police station in the Myingyan district, 20 rebels were killed and several wounded, the communique added.

Navy Turbo Boosts Plane Range, Speed

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Navy yesterday announced the development of a new piston engine which boosts plane ranges and speeds some 20 per cent by harnessing exhaust gases.

Fuel savings of "more than 15 per cent" are possible with the new "Turbo-Cyclone 18" engine being built by the Wright Aeronautical Corp., the Navy said. This should lengthen the normal service range of the P2V Truculent Turtle—listed as "over 5000 miles"—by perhaps 1000 miles.

An announcement last night from Curtiss-Wright Corp., parent company of Wright, put the range and power increase of the new engine at 20 per cent.

Compounding System

Involving a major step forward in the development of reciprocating engines, the "Turbo-Cyclone 18" also will give added range to the Navy's carrier-based AD-1 Skyraider. The engine employs a compounding system to recover the energy normally lost through exhaust fumes.

Such exhaust gases, in the new type, operate three turbines and generate power which is transmitted directly back to the engine crankshaft. Thus increased horsepower is developed by the engine without boosting fuel consumption.

Addition of the "compounding" elements to the Wright Cyclone 18 engine is expected to raise its horsepower from about 2700 to over 3200.

To Be Installed in B-54

A somewhat similar compounding development has been worked out by Pratt and Whitney division of United Aircraft Corp. This "VDT" or variable discharge turbo" engine will be installed in the Boeing B-54 bomber—formerly the B-50C—and boost its range from approximately 6000 to 7500 miles. There has been no official announcement to date of the Pratt and Whitney VDT, though its use in the B-54 was disclosed some weeks ago.

Engineers discounted reports that the compounding principle would have an immediate application to automobile engines. John Sidebottom, secretary of the engine technical committee of the Aircraft Industries Association, said it had been tried nearly 20 years ago by the car builders but rejected.

"The compounding system pays off on long-range, high altitude flights," said Sidebottom. "It might have some application in the design of new railroad locomotives."

Chinchow Periled

Reds Pile Up Worries For Chiang

By A. T. Steele

Shanghai, Sept. 27 (N.Y.H.T.)—Worry piled on worry for the Chinese government today with the news of the growing Communist threat to Chinchow, a vital supply center for besieged government garrisons in south Manchuria.

Following closely on the reported fall of Tsinan, capital of Shantung Province, the Communist drive toward Chinchow rather resembles a right to the chin after a hard blow at the solar plexus. Chinchow is an important communications center on the narrow Nationalist-held coastal strip of southwestern Manchuria. It is the biggest town between the Great Wall and Mukden on the Peiping-Mukden railway.

Reports from Chinchow are too meager to provide an accurate guide to the seriousness of the situation. It is known, however, that Chinese domestic airplines have been ordered to withdraw all their planes and personnel from airfields in the vicinity of Chinchow.

Yihsien, a government bastion 20 miles north of Chinchow, was reported to have fallen after a week-long assault. If this is so, Chinchow is exposed to real danger.

Peiping, China, Sept. 27 (U.P.)—Eight American and two British missionaries were trapped in the Shantung provincial capital of Tsinan when Chinese Communists captured the city Friday, it was announced today.

Preinduction Tests to Start October 4

Preinduction physical and mental examinations will begin Monday for Washington men classified 1-A for the peacetime draft.

In all, a total of 32 District men in the 25 and 24-year-old age groups will be examined during October under present plans, local Selective Service officials announced yesterday.

They coupled the announcement, however, with an expression of doubt that the first November draft call for 55 men would be filled from the men to be examined in October. Most older-age men already have been rejected during the late war, they said.

10 a Day Is Rate

Plans call for 10 men a day to be examined at the Army and Air Force recruiting station, 403 10th st. nw., from October 4 through 10, William E. Leahy, District draft director, said.

Beginning October 11 and continuing throught the 29th, he said, the number will be stepped up to 18 a day. Mental tests will be given at the recruiting station, physicals at Fort Belvoir.

Leahy and Frank D. Norton, deputy draft director, predicted the first few days of examinations will "give us an indication" of whether the opening draft call will be met from among the men presently slated for the tests.

If it seems unlikely, "we'll step up the number of men examined daily," Leahy said.

Army to Test

The physical and mental examinations will be conducted by Army personnel. Those accepted for induction will not don uniforms until 21 days after passing the examinations.

First men to be inducted will go "early in November," according to Norton. Actual induction dates are still under study, he said, but tentative plans call for a group to be taken once a week throughout the month.

B-47 Jet Bomber's Speed Is More Than 600 MPH

The Air Force officially disclosed yesterday that its new Boeing B-47 jet bomber has a speed of more than 600 miles an hour—comparable to most jet fighters flying today.

At the same time, the USAF said that the North American B-45 has a speed of more than 550 miles an hour. Both jet bombers previously had been listed in the "500 mile an hour class."

Romanian Oil Deal May Bring Boycott

Tel Aviv, Israel, Sept. 27 (U.P.)—Ministry of Supply officials reported today that the Shell Oil Co. had threatened to halt shipments to Israel if the government carried out its plan to buy oil from Romania.

An Israeli commission recently signed an agreement with Romanian officials to exchange citrus fruits for approximately 20,000 tons of crude oil and 5000 tons each of gasoline, kerosene and diesel fuel. Deliveries were expected to start in a few days.

Mediator Revising U. N. Report on Slaying

Haifa, Palestine, Sept. 27 (U.P.)—Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting chief United Nations mediator in Palestine, decided at the last minute today to revise, and possibly soften, his statement to the Security Council charging Israel with full responsibility for the death of Count Folke Bernadotte.

Contents of the statement were ordered withheld from the press.

Israel Admits Killing Two In Arab Plane

Tel Aviv, Israel, Sept. 27 (AP).—An Arab plane in which two British corespondents were killed was shot down by an Israeli fighter when it failed to heed a warning to land, a government statement said today.

The plane crashed last Friday in flames, killing David Woodford of the London Daily Telegraph and John Nixon of the BBC.

An Israeli spokesman said the fighter approached the Arab plane north of Safad, signaled it to land, then fired a warning burst. These were disregarded and the plane was shot down, he added.

The spokesman said Arab planes of the type had been over Jewish lines in the Safad area in recent weeks, apparently on reconnaissance flights.

In Haifa, Brig. Gen. William Riley, U. N. Truce Commission chief of staff, said Trans-Jordan forces were responsible for the killing of four unarmed persons in a convoy en route from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem last week.

John Locke Lewis, a Philadelphia engineer, was one of the victims. The convoy, under escort by the United Nations, was attacked near Latrun.

Israel Population Grows to 740,000

Tel Aviv, Israel, Sept. 27 (AP).—In four months of statehood, Israel's Jewish population has increased from 657,000 to 740,000, and by the end of the year is expected to reach 805,000.

The average cost of moving a Jewish immigrant from Europe to Israel is $125 plus $600 for care and training after arrival.

desire for a corridor from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

In a text distributed by the Foreign Office before Bevin began to speak, he warned that Palestine "hostilities might break out again" if no decision is taken within the next few weeks. However, Bevin deleted this statement in his delivery.

"We believe that the plan is one in which the two parties should be able to acquiesce without sacrificing any of their vital interests," Bevin declared.

Dr. Charles Malik of Lebanon told the Assembly the Palestine problem would only be solved by a just and equitable agreement between the two parties concerned and "a solution cannot be imposed by force."

He demanded early formation of an economic commission for the Middle East which he said would "prove to be a far better agency for peace than many a decision by the Security Council or the General Assembly."

Russian Opposition To Plan Anticipated

London, Sept. 27 (U.P.)—British Foreign Office quarters said today they expected stiff Russian opposition to the late Count Folke Bernadotte's plan for settling the Palestine dispute.

Russia was believed to oppose any enlargement of Trans-Jordan on the grounds that King Abdullah is a British puppet and to object to the internationalization of Lydda airport and Haifa port for fear that this would play into the hands of "Anglo-American imperialists." These points were part of Bernadotte's plan.

3 N. Y. Jobbers Hit By Clothing Strike

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—The AFL International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union called a strike today against three jobbing shops which had refused to sign union contracts.

Julius Hochman, manager of the union's dress joint board, said the walkout was called to force the firms to agree to union demands and to answer "the challenge of the underworld." Two other non-union shops already have been struck by the garment workers.

A board spokesman said that "one of two union cutters"—key workmen in the garment industry—had been ordered off the job at the jobbing establishments. What effect the absence of the one cutter would have had could not be determined immediately.

The struck jobbers, the union said, distribute work to nonunion contractors outside the city, chiefly in Pennsylvania.

Earlier, an AFL dressmakers union handed out pamphlets in the garment district urging its members to "smash the open shoppers and their gangster henchmen."

The leaflets were issued by the Joint Board Dress and Waistmakers Union.

Assailing alleged racketeering activities engaged in by some non-union employers, the pamphlets charged that "hoodlums and gangsters" were trying to "spread terror through the market."

Three officials of the joint board were beaten last Monday by pipe-wielding assailants who entered the union office. Two former convicts, still at large, have been indicted by a grand jury in connection with the attacks.

The dressmakers' union is affiliated with ILGWU.

Alger Hiss Sues Chambers

the congressional hearing was privileged, that is, protected from lawsuits. Folliard also pointed out that Hiss, before the committee, had challenged Chambers to make his statements in a way that would permit a court test of their truth.

Then followed this passage, quoted in Hiss' suit:

"Question (by Edward Folliard): 'Are you willing to say now that Alger Hiss is or ever was a Communist?'"

Answer: "Alger Hiss was a Communist and may be now."

Chambers issued a three-sentence comment on the suit from his Westminster home, the Associated Press reported. Chambers said:

"I welcome Mr. Hiss's daring suit. I do not minimize the audacity or the ferocity of the forces which work through him. But I do not believe that Mr. Hiss or anybody else can use the means of justice to defeat the ends of justice."

The Hiss-Chambers dispute could reach the courts in a second way, by a perjury action by Federal law enforcement officials against one or the other. George Morris Fay, United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, said yesterday that since the House Committee has not made a recommendation to the Attorney General on the perjury action, his own office is not yet in a position to take action. The record of the congressional hearings featuring Hiss and Chambers has been turned over to Fay's office for study.

Hiss' suit recalled threat of similar action by William W. Remington, suspended Commerce official He announced last week he would sue Elizabeth T. Bentley and the National Broadcasting Co. for libel unless she retracts the charge she made over NBC that he is a Communist. He set Thursday noon, September 30, as the deadline for the retraction.

Among other portions of the radio broadcast cited by Hiss were these passages in which Lawrence Spivak, editor of the American Mercury, was the questioner:

Spivak: In your judgment can a man be a loyal American citizen and a member of the Communist Party?

Chambers: It is quite impossible.

Spivak: Why do you say that?

Chambers: The Communist Party exists for the purpose of overthrowing whatever government exists under it.

At other points in the questioning Chambers said the Communist Party was very much interested in getting Hiss placed on the Nye Committee investigating the munitions industry—Hiss was employed on its staff at one time—that the Communist underground placed people in the State and Treasury departments to influence policy.

Chamber also was quoted in the petition as making this statement: "I am accusing him (Hiss) of membership in the Communist Party. I am not even accusing him of that. I am simply saying that he was a member of the Communist Party."

Hiss' suit said that Chambers by his statements over the radio had meant to make, and was understood to mean, these charges:

1. That Hiss was a Communist while employed by the United States Government.

2. That Hiss secured important Government jobs for the purpose of influencing policies in favor of communism.

3. That Hiss was disloyal and unfaithful to the United States and betrayed his obligations as an employe of the Federal Government sworn to support the Constitution.

4. That Hiss made false oaths in swearing to support the Constitution.

5. That Hiss committed perjury when under oath before the House committee.

6. That Hiss was and may be now an advocate of violent overthrow of the United States Government in violation of this country's criminal laws.

7. That Hiss was and may be now disqualified from holding an office of trust and confidence in the United States Government, and unworthy of trust in his profession as a lawyer.

All these charges, said Hiss' suit, are "untrue, false, and defamatory."

The charges, said the suit, have damaged Hiss in his professional reputation and office, have brought him into public odium and contempt, and have brought him great pain and mental anguish.

gators that Veterans' Administration employes listed their union affiliations on their loyalty pledges and that records of the membership were on file in VA personnel offices.

Earlier, White, Negro chairman of the UPW's Bronx Veterans Hospital Chapter, protested that he had been asked to act as "a stool pigeon and rat" when called as a witness before the subcommittee.

When asked to name some of the persons who attended meetings of his chapter, White replied:

"On advice of counsel, I think that's an improper question."

The charges of Communist activities were made against the teachers local by officials of the Radio Electronics Institute of America, a private school picketed by the union since August 18. The school conducts radio courses for veterans.

Wythe Williams, spokesman for the institute, said there was no dispute with the union over wages. He said the school pays more than the scale demanded by the union.

The hearing was opened by Representative Samuel K. McConnell, jr. (R., Pa.), subcommittee chairman. He said the investigation would seek to ascertain to what extent, if any, the union follows the Communist Party line in possible violation of Federal law and to the impediment of veterans' education.

Other members of the subcommittee are Representatives Ellsworth B. Buck (R., N. Y.) and John S. Wood (D., Ga.).

Phone Strike Authorized

A strike by more than 10,000 Michigan Bell Telephone Co. operators and accounting employes was authorized here yesterday by the 13-man executive board of the Communications Workers of America (Ind.).

Date of strike was declared dependent on progress in current negotiations.

The strike action was requested by the CWA's Division 44 following a referendum among the Michigan membership. The CWA seeks an across-the-board wage increase of 13 cents an hour, of $5.20 a week. The company has offered a $2 to $5 weekly increase.

Meanwhile, "no progress" was reported by union-management spokesmen yesterday in negotiations between Division 50, CWA, representing some 3000 Washington area telephone operators, and the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

In New York, the long lines department of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. increased a wage offer it had made last week to the 25-000-member CIO American Union of Telephone Workers, but the company offer still is "entirely unacceptable," the union said.

A union spokesman said the company offered to add another dollar per week for plant craftsmen in the New York area. This, he said, would bring the top increase for New York plant craftsmen to $6 weekly.

In addition, he said, the company widened its proposal of last week to include certain increases in the Northwestern States.

CIO Speeding Leftist Ouster

By The Associated Press

The CIO stepped up its drive to oust left-wingers yesterday by authorizing a probe into activities of its Greater New York (City) Council.

CIO President Philip Murray ordered the investigation when confronted with a long list of charges against the council's leadership signed by a group of right-wing union leaders, headed by Louis Hollander of the New York State CIO Council.

The charges ran all the way from deviations from CIO political policy, which calls for outright support for President Truman and opposition to Henry Wallace, to "neglect of duty, improper expenditures . . . and malfeasance in office of certain of its officers."

The complaint named no names. Murray said he will appoint a committee of three CIO executive council members within a week to start hearings on the charges shortly thereafter.

Murray said whatever the three-man committee recommends will be considered by the entire CIO executive council at Portland, Oreg., in mid-November.

A growing fight has been developing among New York City CIO union leaders for many months. A number of principal CIO union leaders withdrew from the CIO city council, charging it with Communist sympathy.

Atom Spy Data Cites Groves Testimony

The atomic spying report cited testimony by Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, head of the Manhattan District atom bomb project, to show that Presidents Roosevelt and Truman knew of Russian efforts to spy out nuclear secrets.

Groves was asked by Robert Stripling, investigator for the House Committee on Un-American Activities, if he ever reported Russian efforts in that field to the White House.

He replied "yes," and went on:

"It was brought to the attention of Presiden Truman in the first report that was made to President Truman after he took office.

The report then complained of "efforts of the executive to withhold from the American people and from duly constituted committees of the legislative branch, information as to the existence of the Communist espionage appartus in the United States and as to its operations during World War II."

An another section, the report stated:

"While the war was in progress, it is apparent that prosecution for acts of treachery by persons employed on the atom bomb project would have revealed the very secret of the project's existence. But hostilities ceased over three years ago, and failure by the Executive up to now to initiate prosecution, and in connection with that failure, to attempt to withhold from the American people themselves, even the information that such acts of treachery took place and were induced by a widespread and well organized Communist espionage apparatus, is indefensible."

cated a tieup of all atomic spying at the top.

The committee also said it had indications of "other acts of apparent treachery" that require further investigation.

One of the cases centered around Arthur Alexandrovich Adams, whom the committee called "virtually a 'charter member' Communist of the Soviet Union." Adams, born either in Sweden or Russia, was in this country during the war and was "actively engaged in espionage activities for the Soviet government," the report said.

Adams "experienced considerable success," the report said, and in 1944 Government agents found in his room "highly secret information regarding the atomic bomb plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn." Adams tried in 1945 to leave the United States, but was stopped by Government agents. The committee said it may recommend indictments for perjury against two of its witnesses, Victoria Stone and Eric Bernay, accusing them of connection with Adams, attempted flight.

The report said Adams became acquainted with Hiskey during the war. Hiskey, now teaching chemistry at Polytechnic Institute in Brooklyn, N. Y., is a native of Wisconsin. He is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, and while a student there met his first wife, Marcia Sand.

The committee said Hiskey and his wife both refused to answer questions "concerning their Communist affiliations and connections" while at the unversity, but she said she is not a Communist now.

The committee said he was ordered to active Army duty because Army security officers wanted to get him out of the atomic bomb project. The report quoted one such officer, an unnamed "Colonel X," as saying "we were convinced that he was a subversive agent."

Hiskey served in Alaska and the Pacific, the report said, and added that in Alaska he was put to "counting underwear."

The report said "it is apparent" from evidence before the committee "that Hiskey was engaged in Soviet espionage in connection with the atom bonb."

When Hiskey went into the Army, the report said, he helped Adams establish a contact with Chapin, also an atomic bomb project scientist and now employed by a brewery in Newark, N. J. Chapin gave Hiskey a key to give to Adams, the report said, and Chapin told the committee the key was to be "the instrument of identity" between him and Adams at meetings to be held later.

Chapin told the committee he met Adams later, but decided not to give Adams any information.

The committee called Chapin "a very cooperative witness," and said he denied ever having been a member of the Communist Party. Chapin also said he would not be "willing at this time to risk the security of the American people by delivering to Russia the secret of the atom bomb."

Marcia Sand Hiskey's connection, the committee said, was that she transmitted letters from Chapin to Hiskey, and the letters served as signals to Adams.

The meetings between Hiskey and Chapin, the letter from Chapin and Chapin's meeting with Adams "present a clear case of a conspiracy . . . to divulge secret and classified information relating to the atom bomb project to a Soviet espionage agent," the report said, adding:

"The committee recommends immediate prosecution of the conspirators."

The committee said that though Chapin "committed an indictable offense" his participation was mitigated by his help to the committee and the fact that he "got cold feet" and did not give information to Adams.

"Chapin impressed the committee as a person of deep sincerity who, in a moment of weakness, had made a vital mistake," the report said.

"Scientist X," a scientist at the University of California, was not identified, the committee explained, because conflicts in evidence regarding him have not been cleared up.

Both Hiskey and Chapin worked in the "Sam" laboratory where the gaseous diffusion process for separation of uranium was developed. That process was incorporated in the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic plant. The laboratory first operated in Columbia University at New York and later at the University of Chicago.

The report said "Scientist X" met Nelson at Nelson's home late one night in March, 1943, and read to him a "complicated formula" which Nelson copied. The report said the committee does not know what the formula was but "the inference is irresistible" that it concerned development of the atom bomb.

Nelson, born in Yugoslavia in 1903, was identified by the committee as a Soviet agent and one-time Communist Party candidate for the State Legislature in Pennsylvania.

The report said that a few days after he met "Scientist X" Nelson met Peter Ivanov, Soviet Vice Consul at San Francisco, in a San Francisco Park and "transferred something to Ivanov." The committee said it did not know whether he gave Ivanov the formula. Later, the report added, a third secretary from the Russian Embassy in Washington, a man named Zubilin, arrived at Nelson's home and "paid Steve Nelson 10 bills of unknown denomination."

"Scientist X" appeared before the committee, the report said, and denied ever having known Nelson or Nelson's wife.

The committee said Kamen's meeting with Soviet representatives, including Gregory Kheifets, Russian vice consul, also took place in San Francisco. They met in a downtown restaurant.

Part of their conversation was taken down, the report said, and a former atomic scientist analyzed the transcript for the committee. The information given Kheifets "very definitely" was secret, the report said, but "there appears to be little, if any, evidence at this time that his revealing of classified information was willful and deliberate."

The committee also linked Adams to a group of persons in New York, and said "they represent a Communist echelon even higher than the highest echelon of the open Communist Party in the United States."

This group was named by the report as Victoria Stone, now operating a jewelry business; Julius Heiman, a steel importer; Eric Bernay, now in the phonograph record manufacturing business; Samuel Novick, president of the Electronics Corp. of America, and Dr. Louis Miller, described as the personal physician of several of the others.

The committee said Miss Stone was closely associated with Adams, and Heiman made frequent trips to Stockholm "for the purpose of Communist consultation and for transporting data to Russia." It related that Adams worked for Novick and Bernay during the war, and Novick helped Adams enter the United States in 1938.

"The testimony of Stone, Novick and Bernay as to the nature of the associations is vague, contradictory and otherwise incredible. The information the committee has is going to be investigated, and if it is substantiated these individuals are going to be cited for perjury committed in testifying before the committee."

Bernay, in New York, termed the Committee's report "idle banter" and "political baiting."

"I invite Mr. Thomas," he said, "to remove himself from congressional immunity and repeat the contemptible lies in public so that I can take him before the public courts."

He said "I will consult with my attorney" about the report.

The committee said its investigation is continuing, and one of its next goals will be a West Coast spy ring which it says worked with Soviet agents during the war.

The committee recalled evidence it made public a year ago that Ivanov, the consular official who contracted Nelson, asked a Californian named George C. Eltenton to help him get atomic information from scientists at the University of California.

Eltenton approached Haakon Chevalier, a university professor, the report said, who in turn got in touch with J. Robert Oppenheimer, atomic bomb project director. Oppenheimer refused to cooperate, the report added.

House Committee Lists Him as Spy

ARTHUR ADAMS,

Chapin Denies All Charges Of Dealing With Red Spies

New York, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—John H. Chapin, accused of conspiracy to give a Soviet agent information about the atomic bomb, said tonight that he had never been in contact with any Russian agent and that the charges were not true.

A similar denial came from Marcia Sand, one of four American citizens whom the House Un-American Activities Committee said should be charged with treason for trying to steal wartime atomic secrets for the Soviet Union.

Her former husband, Clarence F. Hiskey, another of the accused, was absent throughout the day from his classes at the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute where he is a professor of analytical chemistry. His former wife said the charges against him were ridiculous.

Chapin, a supervisor for the Ballantine Brewery, said he spent 10 days before the committee.

"I answered all the questions—at least all the essential questions," he said.

He said he had never received money from Russian agents.

"I've never been in contact with them," he said.

Chapin said he had known Hiskey about two years and they were very good friends. He said he had not seen him recently.

"I haven't conspired to commit espionage," he said. "I withheld no information from the committee. I answered all their questions."

Chapin said the committee's action came as "a complete shock."

"There's nothing, as far as I know, that I have done that makes me fear legal reprisal," he said. "The immediate effect blasts my personal and professional reputation."

Studebaker Tells of FSA 'Censorship'

By The Associated Press

John W. Studebaker told congressional investigators yesterday that a "loyal but naive" Government official hampered his efforts to teach school children about the evils of communism.

The former Commissioner of Education, who quit that post last July in anger over what he called censorship by the Federal Security Administration, under which he operated, told the Senate investigating committee.

"Many of us believe it is proper education for the children to know the tactics of communism."

He applied his "loyal, but naive" description to John Thurston, administrative assistant to Oscar W. Ewing, FSA Administrator, and said Thurston wanted to limit him to a "positive approach to American democracy."

O'Conor Defends FSA

The exposing of communism should be left to the State Department and the FBI, Studebaker said Thurston told him.

Studebaker said he, too, believed in the positive approach to democracy, but he added he believed it necessary to teach the negative side as well, in condemning communism. He declared there is a "complete void" in American education in that respect.

"Did Thurston ever say not to criticize Communism?" inquired Senator O'Conor (D., Md.).

"No," the witness replied.

When Studebaker called Thurston "naive," O'Conor retorted:

"That's just your opinion."

The Studebaker-Thurston differences arose over the type of material to be used in a "Zeal for Democracy" program handled by the Education Office.

Studebaker made another censorship complaint against Harry Rosenfield, another assistant to Ewing, and again O'Conor came to the defense of FSA.

Speech Changes Cited

The former commissioner told of changes suggested by Rosenfield for a speech Studebaker made in St. Louis last spring.

The witness said he hit at the "Russian government" as a dictatorship and Rosenfield wanted him to change the wording to "Russian system."

The FSA official, he said, also proposed deletion of a statement that the American people would be willing to cooperate with the Soviets if they dropped "aggressive world intentions."

"Then the censorship was very helpful there," O'Conor interjected. "They strengthened the speech for you by making it a stronger statement against communism."

Studebaker said Rosenfield objected that his words were "getting over into the province of the State Department," and O'Conor inquired if the educator was "going out to pronounce foreign policy."

Studebaker said he was merely reporting the Government's policy as he saw it.

"Not Doubting" Loyalty

He emphasized that he had no purpose "to cast any doubt upon the loyalty of Administrator Ewing or any of his associates."

He objected to an order from Ewing pooling education and information service of the Education Office with that of the Security Agency. He said Congress had appropriated money specifically for the work under his jurisdiction.

Chairman Ferguson (R., Mich.) commented that funds for the FSA information service were cut and those of the Education Office were not.

"Therefore the order, in effect, would be diverting funds Congress had appropriated for one purpose to another," Ferguson said.

O'Conor said the law permitted Ewing to direct organization of the FSA and asked if Studebaker were not objecting to the law.

"I object to the way the law is being applied, practically," Studebaker responded.

Again raising a point he had emphasized in his quarrel with Ewing earlier in the year, Studebaker went on:

"I'd like to see the authority in the Office of Education stem not from anyone in partisan politics, but from a board."

In the July exchange he had accused Ewing of trying to inject partisan politics into the field of education.

Be Firm to Soviet, Warren Plea

By B. L. Livingstone

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 27 (AP).—Viewing the foreign situation as "extremely delicate," Gov. Earl Warren sternly urged today a firm and realistic policy in United States dealings with Russia.

The vice-presidential candidate also dwelt on what he called the "Communist conspiracy" at home, in a series of rear platform talks across New York State en route from Buffalo.

Some of the largest platform crowds of his current 18-day-old campaign swing turned out to applaud him at station stops. Approximately 5,000 gathered in Albany, a traditionally Democratic city.

In Syracuse, taking up the Russian crisis, Warren renewed his plea for American unity above political partisanship.

"In spite of the fact that some people have talked about red herrings, there are a lot of Communists at work in this country," he said.

"They have infiltrated into our society in many ways. Unfortunately, they have infiltrated to some extent into our National Government."

Warren enlarged upon this theme in Utica and Albany, saying the Communists "have been working like termites to undermine our Government."

It is "a crying shame," he declared, that there should be "even one Communist in our Government."

He laid the blame at the feet of the Democratic Administration.

"The reason these Communists are here was just to get the vote. They (the Administration) temporized with them, then they owed them something, and permitted them to get jobs."

Chinese Coal Mine Fire

Peiping, Sept. 27 (AP).—Dispatches today said fires have broken out at Fushun coal mines, 20 miles east of Mukden. They are the largest open-cut mines in the world. The fires were attributed to natural causes and were raging in seven pits.

Barkley Tells South 'Antis' Help Dewey

Asheville, N. C., Sept. 27 (AP).—Senator Alben W. Barkley told Southern Democrats tonight a vote for any other candidate than President Truman "is a vote for the Republican nominees."

First of top Democratic candidates to invade the South where many dissident party members are backing South Carolina's Gov. J. Strom Thurmond for President, Barkley said it would "be a tragic thing if the partnership between the Democratic Party and the States of the South were to be destroyed."

Thurmond, States' Rights Democrats' candidate, is on the North Carolina ballot with Truman and Governor Dewey.

Barkley, Democratic vice presidential nominee, spoke at a meeting arranged by the State Democratic Committee.

Should the South break away from the Democratic Party, he declared, "it would leave the South without effective means of promoting its own high aspirations" and "without a voice in the councils of the Nation."

Twenty years ago, he recalled, many Southern Democrats supported a Republican, Herbert Hoover, against Al Smith, the Democratic nominee. "I am sure," he said, "your memories of the one four-year term of President Hoover are sufficiently etched in your mind that need no reminder from me."

Neither Governor Dewey nor Governor Warren, GOP candidates, "knows the South," Berkley said, and in Dewey's case "he opposed the interests of the South by intervening against the South in its fight for more adequate freight rates."

Dewey Aims Peace Plea at Russians

velopment. Everywhere his pledge of rapid expansion of power resources "wherever possible" was closely linked with the international situation.

"Just as we needed vast amounts of hydroelectric power to develop the atomic bomb, we now need power to wage the peace," he said.

Dewey, who calls himself Oregon's "adopted son," first expressed his thanks to the State that virtually clinched his nomination in the primaries last spring to a crowd of 1500 at Salem.

Again Voices Gratitude

At Portland, he motored from his train to the Civic Auditorium to again voice his "gratitude" to an overflow crowd of 4000. It was at the Portland rally that he pledged nothing will be said or done on his part that "will do anything but strengthen our world situation."

"Some people do not understand that we have such a thing as sportsmanship in the United States," he said. "We close ranks when a debate is settled . . .

"It would be wise for all rulers of the world to study that and know it. It is important to the peace of the world that they know it."

As in Illinois, Iowa, Colorado and New Mexico, Governor Dewey gave a lift to the Republican senatorial candidate — Senator Guy Cordon. Cordon's race is an almost no-contest affair, the Democrats running against him Naley Wilson, editor of the CIO Timberworkers publication. Oregon is predominantly an AFL State.

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), who is out of the State working hard for the Dewey-Warren ticket and individual Senate GOP nominees, wasn't mentioned by Dewey in his Oregon appearances.

Governor Dewey indorsed large scale, multiple purpose development of the Columbia, Williamette and Missouri Calleys "at the earliestpossible date," but again opposed application of the TVA type of centralized control to other valley developments.

Repeating his Colorado pledge to give the people of the valleys "home rule" by permitting them to share in the planning and operation of the projects, he called it "a major issue of our time."

"It would be dangerous," he said, "to the freedom of our people to entrust their total control to any three appointed from Washington. He estimated the Nation needs nearly 20 per cent more power-producing capacity in the next five years. To realize our full power potential, he said, existing facilities should be expanded and new projects developed as rapidly as possible, to provide power "at the lowest self-liquidating rate." Once again he took up the cudgel for Congress in its reclamation scrap with the President. Everywhere he repeated his claim that the Republican Congress provided 50 per cent more funds for reclamation than any other Congress in history.

Other western pledges scattered freely through Oregon and Washington and summed up in Seattle tonight:

1. To "press forward" in all the services vital to an expanded, more secure agriculture, including reclamation, drainage, soil conservation and flood control.

2. To open rivers to "ever wider use of navigation."

3. To be guided by the principles of selective cutting and sustained yield in management and development of our timber resources.

4. To protect and increase our abundance of fish and wildlife.

5. To appoint men "who will act without bureaucratic red tape in the interest of the greatest good for the greatest number.

6. To provide sound, long-range budgetary planning for resource development that will take counsel from the people of the regions affected and their representatives in Congress.

Crossing from friendly Oregon into Washington, where the President's friend, Mon Walgren (D.) is trying for a second term as Governor, Dewey stepped up his campaign. He plugged for the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Arthur Langlie, in rear-platform appearances at Vancouver, Kelso, Winlock, Céntralia and Tacoma. At Castle Rock, scene of Dewey's 1944 train wreck, crash survivors gazed ruefully out of the windows. The train didn't stop.

were mingled in the crowd of 20,000 that cheered Mr. Truman in Rebel Stadium.

Gov. Beauford Jester, who once charged that the President had stabbed the South in the back with his Civil Rights program, was an enthusiastic Truman booster today. He assured him publicly that he would triumph over the Dixiecrats and capture the State's 23 electoral votes in November.

In his Dallas speech, Mr. Truman accused the Republicans in Congress of submitting to the lobbies and then departed from his text to say:

"You can't expect the Republicans' spokesman to come out and state clearly who it is the Republican Party is working for. They don't dare do that.

"You'd take them out and hang them if they did. That would be disastrous—or would it?"

Mr. Truman murmured the last part of the sentence, and he was not smiling.

The Chief Executive was introduced by Attorney General Tom Clark, who unconsciously provided the laugh of the day. Talking about Mr. Truman's courage, he told how he was with him when he had to make some of his most important decisions — the dropping of the atomic bomb, the stopping of Joseph Stalin through the Truman doctrine, an dso on.

"I was in court when he stopped Joe Lewis . . ." Clark said, and the tittering began.

Mr. Truman, when it came his time to talk, said: "Tom, you gave me too much credit. It wasn't Joe Lewis I stopped—it was John. I haven't quite that much muscle."

The President never once mentioned Governor Dewey by name, but there was no doubt about the identity of his target when he began to pour scorn on the "unity" talk. That has been the Republican nominee's theme from the outset.

Speaking of "the Republican candidates," he told the crowd in Dallas:

"In making their speeches, they put them on a high level—so high they are above discussing the specific and serious problems which confront the people. . . .

"Republican candidates are apparently trying to sing the American voters to sleep with a lullaby about unity in domestic affairs."

"They don't want unity—they want surrender," Mr. Truman said of his Republican opposition. "They want the kind of unity that benefits the National Association of Manufacturers, the private power lobbies, the real estate lobbies and the selfish interests in this country." Conceding that he was in "a tough, hard political fight," the Democratic standard-bearer told a crowd in Dallas, "I don't intend to surrender, and I don't believe the Americans are going to surrender. I believe that the American people have the intelligence to see through the Republican smoke screen."

The Chief Executive said he would like nothing better than to see unity of purpose and method in domestic affairs. "But I do not want unity so long as it benefits the few at the expense of the many," he said. "I am more interested in millions of people than I am in millions of dollars."

Here in Bonham tonight, Mr. Truman went after Governor Dewey again. Without naming him, he charged that his Republican rival was "under an obligation" to Joseph R. Grundy, high tariff advocate and a power in the Republican Party in Pennsylvania. He charged further here in the heart of Texas that the Republicans in Congress were out to "kill the Cordell Hull program of reciprocal trade agreements.

"The Eightieth Congress," he said, has shown that the Republican party is still the high-tariff party of Smoot and Hawley and Joe Grundy. You can't expect any one under an obligation to Joe Grundy to change it into some other kind of party."

Mr. Truman, in linking Governor Dewey with Grundy, was echoing a charge first made by Harold E. Stassen at the Republican National Convention at Philadelphia. Stassen, now one of the New Yorker's foremost supporters, was furious when the powerful Grundy-Martin faction of the GOP in Pennsylvania threw its support to Governor Dewey in his battle for the presidential nomination.

Off Base Again

Despite the impressive arguments contained in the State Department's report on Berlin and the American note to Moscow, the Russians again scored a victory in propaganda. State Department unpreparedness Saturday night gave the Russians an invaluable gift—24 hours of time during which there was no American answer to the fabricated version of the Berlin negotiations which the Russians broadcast to the world. For an entire day the air waves were filled with the Kremlin's distortions while the Voice of America had to stand by mutely and await the release of the American note. The effect, if not to blunt the force of the Berlin report, was at least to create suspicion on the part of the audience to which American broadcasts are beamed.

The diplomatic note itself is a well-written and compelling document, though in our opinion the report would have been improved by eliminating some of the prefatory editorializing so that the facts could speak for themselves. Apparently the State Department was so wrapped up in the perfection of these documents that it neglected to prepare for the obvious. The result was that when the Moscow radio broke forth just before midnight Saturday with a highly falsified account of the events these documents were designed to cover, no one in the State Department was ready with a reply.

Nothing should have been more apparent than that the Russians would try to get the jump on this country. The same situation occurred last spring over the "Open door" note, and American prestige took a shellacking because of the rigidity that prevailed. At that time it was promised that there would not be a repetition; that responsible officials would be summoned from their homes, if necessary, to prevent another disastrous field day of misrepresentation which a time lag affords the Russians. But evidently when the top State Department officialdom went off to Paris the promise went with them.

Premature publication of the White Paper was not called for. A simple statement, citing the need for critical examination of the Russian claims, would have sufficed. The point is that much of the effect of such exchanges is psychological, and the Voice of America is ill served by its masters unless there is sufficient suppleness and resiliency within the State Department to make maximum use of the foreign broadcasts. When will the State Department's practical performance on this score catch up with its pretensions?

Miss Ward's Prognosis

Miss Barbara Ward, in a new book called The West at Bay, attributes the present sickness of Western civilization, and the mortal threat offered to it by Russian communism, to deep-rooted economic causes, to which the two great wars were merely incidental. She also asserts that the one hope for the recovery of Europe depends upon whether another great business depression in the United States can be avoided.

It is now pretty generally known that the tactics and policy of the Kremlin have been based on a conviction that the United States cannot avert another depression, and that it was for a report tending to cast doubt upon this belief that the celebrated Soviet economist, Eugen S. Varga, was recently disgraced. Miss Ward herself, however, appears none too sanguine. She finds that since the Civil War the behavior of business in the United States has been erratic and unstable and that all our great war booms have been followed by serious slumps. None of these, however, had the same psychological consequences as the collapse of 1929, which served to impair, perhaps permanently, the general confidence in the essential soundness and efficacy of American banking and business methods. Since then investors have been haunted by fear of another depression and have grown almost morbidly watchful of business indices and show a disposition to withdraw their confidence at the slightest symptom of recession.

Miss Ward holds that under an unregulated industrial capitalism the diastolic and systolic rhythm of boom and depression is unescapable. The fundamental reason is that as business attracts new investments, the rapid expansion of the means of production proceeds at a rate which soon outstrips the increase in consumption. This state of affairs is aggravated by the tendency of popular governments to reduce taxation in years of prosperity when revenues are abundant, thereby making available more funds for investment. It is also aggravated by the tendency toward monopolism within business itself—that is, to continued mergers and refinancing.

All these factors were operative in the later 1920s; but not all, according to Miss Ward, are operative now. For one thing the war has multiplied the purchasing power of American wage-earners and enormously increased the purchasing powers of farmers, whose products have increased in price beyond all other commodities. But there has been no corresponding rise in the value of securities; on the contrary, Miss Ward observes, "industrial stocks are listed, on the whole, below their actual earning value," a fact which she ascribes to the disappearance of the "old bland confidence" of American investors.

But while the immediate prospect (at the time Miss Ward's book was finished) was not disconcerting, she found the long view much less promising. The chief cause of her gloom seems to be that "none of the basic maladjustments in the capitalist industrial society has yet been overcome in the United States or indeed in any free community." What Miss Ward fears, and what the Europeans fear, and what the Kremlin confidently expects, is that with the coming of another depression the disposition of Americans to revert to their traditional isolationism will become too powerful for the Government to resist. The demand will arise that the money and efforts now being spent to promote European recovery be used instead for the promotion of recovery at home.

Storage Abroad

The battle of the Secretaries—Sawyer and Brannan—over how much grain the United States should export during this crop year is put into sharper focus by improved world crop reports. Secretary Sawyer has arrayed the Department of Commerce on the side of limiting exports, theoretically as a move to force down domestic prices. On the other hand, Secretary Brannan and the Department of Agriculture are concerned with preventing a costly domestic grain surplus which the Government would have to underwrite through the price support program.

Events are moving on the side of Mr. Brannan. French crops are so improved that France is out of the American wheat market at least until January and possibly for the year. Britain will purchase its import requirements from outside the dollar area. Moreover, present estimates place the world's exportable grain at approximately 10 per cent above last year. There is still plenty of need for American grain in some areas abroad, but the limiting factor on imports is one of purchasing power. Sharp reductions in foreign consumption of American grain could cause a severe back-up during this year of bumper harvests in corn and wheat.

The problem thus becomes one of storage capacity. Our own facilities are short, especially with respect to corn. A gimmick in the congressional renewal of the Commodity Credit Corporation charter prohibits the CCC from acquiring additional bins or retaining those on which leases are about to expire. Efforts are being made to provide additional storage on farms, but the prospect is that a considerable amount of grain will have to be dumped on the market.

Thus it is pertinent to inquire whether there has been any official exploration of the feasibility of storing American grain abroad where facilities are available. Even though France and Britain will not be buying, we shall still have to supply much of the diet for the German occupation zone. Record amounts of grain have been shipped abroad during the summer, and port capacity has been jammed. But beginning in October the strain will be relaxed. Why would it not be possible to move grain out of storage here and send it to Europe for stockpiling, not only for current consumption, but also against future requirements? Certainly if the pressure of a domestic surplus is as serious as Secretary Brannan indicates, this is a safety valve that ought not to be overlooked.

America Mirrored

The new considerations before us as a Nation are put well in the annual report of Edwin J. Heath, historian of the District of Columbia Society of the Sons of the American Revolution:

> Every American problem of the past year has been complicated by international phases. Every nation . . . must reckon with American reaction to every move it makes or plans. Our concern is worldwide. Election returns everywhere mean something in our future. We no longer can take the events of the day in our stride, but must forever be weighing the effect of our behavior on those elsewhere who are watching us. Our power for good is weakened so often by developments which we know are of momentary concern, but can so easily be distorted in the eyes of those seeking our guidance . . .
> Americans are reluctant to assume a ponderous pose, but every day it becomes more necessary for us to guide people everywhere by our example here at home. It is a difficult role, and it calls for unity of expression at the time when we are in the midst of a political debate. So much of our security depends upon being understood abroad that we are embarrassed in every move we make and in every utterance. Forces are at work, some with hostile intent, others inadvertent, to show us up in our worst light when we need to be at our best.

In other words, the need for a conception of responsibility and consistency, is something that inevitably goes with the position of power and prestige which we have assumed in the world. Even in a political year, campaign orators can ill afford to overlook the fact that their every utterance is reflected abroad.

The Issue At Berlin

The foremost cause of the turmoil afflicting the world is clearly mirrored in the State Department's report on the Berlin crisis. It reveals in detail the terrible handicap of democratic powers in dealing with a regime whose word counts for nothing, whose assurances turn out to be only snares designed to catch the unwary. With the exception of Henry Wallace and his followers, most Americans have known that the word of the Soviet Union could not be accepted at face value. Yet the duplicity revealed in the negotiations on the Berlin controversy is so instructive that every citizen who aspires to understand the current problem of maintaining peace ought to familiarize himself with the report.

During the negotiations in Moscow Foreign Minister Molotov tried to limit the Soviet agreement on lifting the Berlin blockade to those restrictions which have been imposed since June 18. When the Western envoys objected, Stalin personally suggested that the wording be changed to "restrictions lately imposed." This was done and Stalin's suggestion was incorporated in the directive sent to the military commanders in Berlin who were to work out the details of the agreement. Clearly this was an agreement by the head of the Soviet government to lift the blockade in all of its aspects. In Berlin, however, Marshal Sokolovsky reverted to the June 18 date and refused to consider lifting any restrictions imposed prior to that time.

On the controversial question of a uniform currency for Berlin the Moscow agreement provided:

> A financial commission of representatives of the four military governors shall be set up to control the practical implementation of the financial arrangements indicated above, involved in the introduction and continued circulation of a single currency in Berlin.

To any fair-minded person the meaning is unmistakable. Great Britain, France, the United States and Russia were agreeing that only the German mark of the Soviet zone should be used as currency in all Berlin, but that control over that currency should be vested in a four-power body. In Berlin, however, Sokolovsky insisted that the four-power financial commission should have no authority whatever over the operations of the German Bank of Issue with respect to Berlin.

Similarly the Moscow agreement called for "a satisfactory basis for trade between Berlin and third countries and the western zones of Germany" under four-power control. In Berlin the Soviet commander insisted that such trade would be subject to Soviet licenses. Most flagrant of all was Sokolovsky's attempt to extend Soviet control over the air corridor connecting Bizonia with Berlin as his price for any agreement to relax the land and water blockade. No such proposal had been mentioned in the Moscow agreement of August 30. Its injection into the discussions at Berlin was clearly an act of bad faith. When this was brought to the attention of the Kremlin, it claimed that the Allied Control Council had imposed regulations on air traffic of the occupation forces back in 1945 and that the United States had since refused to obey them. The fact is that the Soviet proposed such control of the air corridors in 1945, but its proposal was rejected. The Kremlin backed up all of Sokolovsky's absurd interpretations of the August 30 agreement. Its reply to the protest of the Western powers comes close to an open admission of trickery.

Beyond this, Moscow takes the attitude that Berlin is a part of the Soviet zone and must be under Soviet control. As justification for this unwarranted flouting of the Potsdam agreement the Russian note of last July 14, complained that the Western powers had destroyed the four-power system of administration in Germany and attempted to set up a government for western Germany at Frankfurt. We always thought that this venture of creating a western German government was unwise. It put the United States in the position of following two conflicting policies with regard to Germany. But at worst it was only a recognition of the failure of four-power control because of Moscow's refusal to cooperate. Moscow was informed, moreover, that it was never the intention of the Western powers to create a central German government. In no event could planning and discussion in this field justify Moscow's attempt to coerce the Western powers by starving the people of Berlin.

The issue that the Western powers have raised before the Security Council, therefore, is the settlement of disputes by orderly and peaceful means. As the text of the three-power note bluntly says, Moscow has "resorted to acts of force rather than to the processes of peaceful settlement." In recent weeks, moreover, she has been thumbing her nose at the patient American-British-French efforts to work out a peaceful settlement. Such a record cannot be dismissed as if it were merely a row between the big powers over a bit of territory. What is at stake is nothing less than law and order in the world.

In these circumstances the appeal to the Security Council must be regarded as only a first step. Unfortunately, that agency can be throttled by the big power veto. Perhaps the case against the Soviet Union will then be transferred to the General Assembly where it can at least be aired for enlightenment of world opinion. Some of the juridical issues involved may well be referred to the World Court. After all, the rights of the Western powers in Berlin are a matter of international agreement. What could be more rational or more in keeping with the spirit of the United Nations than to ask for an interpretation of those controverted rights in the World Court? Meanwhile the powers that are courageously resisting Moscow's coercion must prepare themselves against the grim possibility that the Soviet Union may move from coercion to an aggressive assault on the Berlin airlift. The need for courageous application of Secretary Marshall's "keep moving" policy has never been more apparent than it is today.

"Mecca Of Mediocrity"

As a practicing physician of the District, and as a member of the District of Columbia Medical Society, I feel it incumbent upon myself to answer some of the justified resentment which appeared in your paper after the publication of the recent article in the local medical journal entitled "Washington—Mecca of Mediocrity."

In the first place, this article was merely one man's opinion, and certainly does not represent the official or nonofficial opinion of the great majority of the District physicians.

In the second place, most District physicians feel that the average Washington resident is more intelligent, more cooperative, and more industrious than the average cross-section of any other city. That is why we practice here, and that is why we are proud of our city.

And in the third place, if the writer of this unfair article had the courage of his conviction, he would have signed his name to the article, so that all of the "Washington mediocrity" could stay away from his door, and give him plenty of time to think over his folly.

Capitalist Comparison

The other day on the streetcar, sitting behind two young men, evidently students, I could not help but overhear their conversation. One was apparently trying to persuade the other that everything in this country was all wrong and in Russia all right, and he was dropping such juicy morsels as "exploited workers" and "imperialistic capitalism."

Such catch phrases must mean something to somebody, but they certainly leave me cold. If these youngsters would sluice away the meringue and get down to fundamentals, they would realize that a capitalist is merely one who believes in private ownership of property; the Communist believes in state ownership of everything, except perhaps the clothes on his back or the last meal he has ingested.

By owning a six-room row house, I am just as much a capitalist as the bloated (or thin) bondholder who has 17 bedrooms and sends the butler into the basement every morning for a bucketful of money. The best answer to the Commie is to compare conditions in the USSR with those in the U. S. A.

As to being imperialists, when did Russia ever turn loose of any territory such as we did with Cuba and the Philippines? On the contrary, the Soviets swallowed Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia and a large part of Poland, and are even now in the process of taking Germany, Austria, the Balkan states, etc. And they call us imperialists! "Speaking Of Gluttons"

In your September 23 editorial "Speaking of Gluttons," you offer to explain to President Truman why his attack on Wall Street is not meeting with much response.

The Gallup Poll for California, published in the same issue of your paper, shows that President Truman's popularity has increased in the last three weeks. These figures seem to contradict your thesis; and an examination of your statistics of prosperity shows quickly why you have come to the wrong conclusion.

By comparing prices, wages and profits for the years 1912-1914 and 1933, respectively, with those for 1948, you are trying to demonstrate that workers and farmers have improved their relative position much more than Wall Streeters and the real estate interests.

That is not the issue which President Truman is putting before the country in his campaign. What he is saying is that since the Republicans took control of Congress the real income of wage and salary earners has gone down while the profits of big business have soared to unprecedented heights.

Against that charge, the Republicans have no defense. Since the Republicans, with the help of some Dixiecrats—killed effective price controls in June, 1946, the cost of living has increased 30 per cent, while average weekly earnings of industrial workers have increased only 22 per cent. Corporate profits after taxes, however, have increased 50 per cent.

From 1932 to 1946 the standard of living of the average American has gone up; since 1946 it has been going down, while the profits of business are continuing to rise.

"National unity" is not enough of a program to cause the American farmer, wage earner and white-collar worker to throw out an Administration that has served them well for 16 years.

Governor Dewey's lofty declaration may appeal to the refined ears of students of elocution. To the little people, the heartier diet offered by Harry Truman appears to be more appealing, more nourishing—and more trustworthy.

Pure Democrats

Whatever the outcome of the election, President Truman has done and is doing a great service to the cause of political honesty and clarity by causing the withdrawal from the Democratic Party of the antilabor and racially biased Southerners who oppose the progressive planks for civil rights and labor legislation in the Democratic platform which President Truman by his record and his recommendations enthusiastically supports.

With Wallace pulling out of the Democratic Party the Communist fellow travelers and dupes who are always praising Russia and condemning the United States, and the States' Rights "Dixiecrats" pulling out the reactionaries, the Democratic Party as a whole will be a truly and genuinely liberal one, supporting progressive measures at home and repudiating appeasement and opposing dictatorship and aggression abroad.

Neglected Memento

I passed through Alexandria and heard about George Washington's fire engine. Proudly I went with my little boy to show him this prized item. The door was closed; no one was there. I did the next best thing: I held my little boy up and we both peeked through the dirty glass that was in the door. What did I see? I saw a lot of rubbish and filth in front of this prized fire engine, and I thought to myself: A fire hazard in a firehouse!

The next thought that came to my mind was this: If the people of Alexandria don't have enough gumption to appreciate and tenderly care for this fire engine, why don't they give it to us up here in New York, and we will at least keep it clean and let maybe a couple hundred thousand people a year see it!

Status Of Cyprus

Recently, in an interview, King Paul of Greece voiced a hope that the island of Cyprus may someday become part of Greece. This suggestion that the British allow Cyprus to unite with Greece in exchange for grants of naval and air bases to Britain in Cyprus and Crete was censured severely by the British.

The location of Cyprus, third largest island in the Mediterranean after Sicily and Sardinia, is of great strategic importance and the British wish to make use of its strategic location. But many critics of King Paul's statement have failed to give proper consideration to the fact that he is expressing the sentiment of the great majority of the inhabitants of the island.

It must be remembered that the Cypriotes have been Greek in language, in custom and tradition since ancient times. They remained Greek after the Turks came into Cyprus in 1570 and through 200 years of Turkish rule. And they remain a part of the Hellenic world today.

Cypriotes feel that they are a part of Greece just as are the Aegean Isles and Crete, and it is the desire of this Hellenic people to live under Greek administration rather than British. "Let Britain have naval and air bases but let us unite with the mother country." So runs the sentiment of most of the 425,000 people of Cyprus.

Cyprus has been a British crown colony since 1914. Back in 1878, by treaty with the Sultan, Great Britain took over the occupation and administration of the island. In 1914, on the outbreak of war with Turkey, the islapd was annexed to the British crown. It will be remembered that in 1915, the British offered Cyprus to Greece on condition that Greece aid Serbia. King Constantine rejected this offer because he did not want to enter the war. Under the treaty of Lausanne which was ratified in 1924 the annexation of Cyprus by Britain was formally recognized. But the people of Cyprus have never ceased to hope for eventual union with Greece.

Marxism No Cure

A CIO committee, after touring Soviet Russia two years ago, reported that they liked Soviet ideology and methodology, but not the take-home wages. When Karl Marx cried, "workmen arise, you have nothing to lose but your chains," half the world swallowed it hook, bait and sinker.

Now Soviet Russia and Labor Party England have shown that marxism deprives everyone of more than the old chains of liberty, meal tickets and shirts. Marx failed to realize that personal incentive is the hay that makes the old mare go, especially incentive for the man on top, brains of the mare. Her hind legs need incentive too, extra reward for extra service, as intelligent industrialists know and some labor unionists fail to appreciate—those who would restrict the workman's output.

"Things are wrong, therefore socialism is right," say the Marxists. Much is wrong and needs correcting, but marxism is a poison, not a cure. Cures must be found, or the several million Wallaceites will find other millions of followers when the next 1929 hits us. We know what followed the last crash, depression, a man on a hobby-horse and war.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Cripps' Battle

A VISITOR is in Washington who comes from a people under siege. Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer in Britain's Labor government, lean, austere, self-disciplined, is a symbol of the struggle going forward in England.

That the siege is against the forces of economic catastrophe makes it no less rigorous. The end of the shooting war three years ago brought very few differences to the beleaguered population of the tight little island.

Speaking not long ago in Parliment, Cripps reported definite and substantial gains against the threatening enemy. His report of progress got very little attention in the news here. It seemed almost as though the siege of Britain had already been discounted as lost.

What Cripps said in his report was that Britain's annual trade deficit with the rest of the world had been reduced by 55 per cent. This must be measured against the gravity of Britain's plight since the end of World War II to understand its significance.

FROM THE outbreak of war in 1939 through 1945, the British threw into the battle most of the resources that had made it possible in other years to balance their budget with the world. Through various intangibles—investments, shipping and so on—they could pay for the imports essential to feed a population that cannot sustain itself on England's limited acres of tillable land. At the same time, colonies and dependencies severed ancient ties.

This meant the kind of belt-tightening that many looking on from the outside thought impossible, and it may still prove impossible. Yet the progress reported by Cripps was extraordinary. Between December, 1947, and June of 1948 the volume of British exports rose from 120 per cent to 138 per cent of the volume for 1938. It is now believed to be well above the target figure of 140 per cent of prewar.

Marshall Plan aid definitely helped in this recovery. But, as Cripps pointed out, the British net contribution of $282,000,000 in grants this year to other European countries is not insignificant.

Anyone who has been in England since the war knows what sacrifices are back of this record. It means a monotonous level of living with almost nothing left over for even little luxuries.

A letter from a friend in England recently says that, in the face of a meat shortage more acute than at any time, "Norwegian beaver" is being sold. The suspicion is prevalent that this is nothing more than rat. There is siege fare for you.

On the sporadic black market horse meat sells for 50 to 60 cents a pound. A broken-down cart horse will bring $200 to $225 from a black market slaughterer.

OFFICIALLY, Cripps is here for the annual meeting of the governing board of the World Bank, of which he is vice chairman. But he will talk with American policy-makers about Britain's most pressing problem today.

That problem can be summarized this way: What will happen to the program to increase exports, and thereby correct the unbalance in world trade, in view of Britain's beginning rearmament and remobilization program?

A solemn Parliament has heard in recent days the steps the government in London is taking because of the deadly seriousness of the crisis between East and West. The cost of taking those steps was not included in a budget cut to an austerity pattern.

What Cripps is likely to say while he is here is that Britain cannot afford to pay for rearmament without risking the wreck of carefully laid plans aimed at bringing the precarious British economy back into balance once more. Already broad hints have come from London that some new form of lend-lease will be necessary if Britain is really to rearm to meet the threat of new aggression.

In recent months many Americans have felt critical and even bitter toward Britain. British policy on Palestine has seemed to some to be hopelessly anchored in a past that will never come again. Others have been skeptical of the British experiment in democratic socialism.

But in spite of all disagreements, the partnership of Great Britain at this moment of terrible peril and uncertainty is of paramount importance. Ignoring the strategic considerations, which loom ever larger, we must say that here are a people who believe in the things we believe in and who will stand up for them.

Surtax On Land

The fiscal spasm of the Board of Trade over the need for raising a few million more dollars seem to have affected their optic nerves. They can't see that there are about half a billion dollars of community created values in the District, absolutely untaxed—the present assessed value of taxable lands.

A 1 per cent tax on land values would raise a little over five million dollars a year. Such tax would cost a small home owner from $5 to possibly $8 a year while his minimum tax under even a 1 per cent general sales tax would run from $10 to $15.

Cripps In Washington

THE CHANCELLOR of the Exchequer, Sir Stafford Cripps, comes to Washington with an impressive record of achievement at home and abroad. Among Americans who study the record there can be no doubt about the self-reliance of the British people in their struggle to recover their financial independence.

LIPPMANN

As good a measure as any of how hard they have worked, how austerely they have been willing to live, is to be had by looking at the figures which show what percentage of their imports were paid for by their exports before the war and after. In 1938 only a little more than half (55 per cent) of the goods they imported were paid for by goods produced in the United Kingdom and then exported. In the first quarter of this year exports paid for three quarters of the imports. In the month of July—the latest available figures—the proportion had been jacked up to four fifths.

This has been done by producing more and consuming less. There is no precedent for so much effort and for so much sacrifice by a free people in time of peace.

THE RECORD of economic collaboration with the Marshall Plan countries is also impressive. There have been difficulties and controversies, there have been disagreements and pressure, about the allocation of direct aid from the United States and about intra-European mutual aid. But agreements are now in sight which make the United Kingdom the largest, Belgium-Luxembourg the second largest, contributor to intra-European recovery.

So while the United Kingdom is to receive 1263 million dollars in direct aid from the United States, she will be contributing 282 million dollars to Europe. She is also allowing European countries to buy out of their sterling balances 218 million dollars of British goods. Thus in the 12 months ending June 30 of next year the United Kingdom will be exporting to Europe about 500 million dollars in goods for which she will not receive goods in return. That is nearly 40 per cent of the direct aid she will receive from the United States.

YET THE Chancellor will find in Washington what he no doubt already knows—that there is considerable concern and disappointment about British policy in Europe. Senator Fulbright expressed this feeling in London last week when he said that "the real purpose of the Marshall Plan is to help some kind of united Europe able to stand on its own feet. If there is no acceptance of at least the principles of this plan after a year's trial, if the objective is eliminated, it will be difficult to find votes to continue financing the plan."

There is a very real problem of Anglo-American relations here which will have to be clarified before the new Congress meets next year. Reduced to its essentials the problem is, I think, as follows: the large sums appropriated for the recovery program by Congress were voted on the assumption that a European system, which Britain would take the lead in forming, could be developed. There is now an impression that this British government is reluctant to enter a European system. If that impression is correct, then the whole project of Western Union will have to be reconsidered.

This may not mean, and it certainly should not mean, the discontinuation of Marshall aid. But it will mean that its political foundations cannot be what Congress and the people were told they would be, and that a different continental policy will have to be worked out.

FOR IF Britain concludes that its interests in the Commonwealth and in the non-European world prevent it from entering a European Union, then what is to be the British and what is to be the American conception of the future of continental Europe?

It is evident that in so far as Britain remains aloof, the position of France is profoundly affected. Thus far in dealing with Germany the leadership in the west has been British, on the basic questions more British than American. But it will be impossible for the French to accept, it will impose an intolerable strain upon any French government to accept, a condition in which Britain is withdrawn from the continent and yet able to exercise a greater and more decisive influence than is France upon the settlement with Germany.

Virginia Republicans Gleeful Over Democratic Squabble

Virginia's Republicans were chortling yesterday as they watched the breach widen between pro and anti-Truman Democrats in their State.

Republican leaders said new discord between opposing Democratic factions increased chances that the State's 11 electoral votes will go to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, GOP presidential candidate.

Pro-Trumanites were preparing to set up a Richmond headquarters to campaign actively for the national Democratic Party's presidential ticket of President Truman and Senator Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.).

Anti-Trumanites were also preparing to set up a Richmond headquarters—apparently dedicated to the idea of keeping hands off the presidential race in their State and letting the voters work their wills unguided.

Virginia Dixiecrats said it didn't make any difference what the other parties were doing—they have already completed their designs to carry the State for Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, States' Rights presidential candidate.

What set the Virginia political pot boiling anew was Saturday's meeting of the Democratic State central committee, in Richmond. In a 17-minute session, the committee resolved to get out the Democratic vote in November, but left unanswered the question of what presidential candidates it wanted the vote out for. It cold-shouldered rival efforts of both the pro-Trumanites and the pro-Thurmondites to get support for their candidates.

The committee is the central group of the State Democratic convention, which in turn is on record as opposing President Truman's renomination because of the civil rights program. It is identified with the dominant political organization of the State, among whose key figures are Senator Harry F. Byrd (D. Va.) and Governor William M. Tuck.

Announcement that a Virginia campaign will be made for President Truman came yesterday from Martin A. Hutchinson, Richmond attorney and a leader of anti-organization Democrats. He made the announcement after conferences with various Truman backers, including Col. Francis Pickens Miller of Charlottesville, anti-organization contender for the Governor nomination in next year's race.

Hutchinson said it was "manifest" from Saturday's meeting that the Byrd-Tuck-Combs (E. R. Combs, former Democratic National Committeeman from Virginia) organization "is now openly opposed to the national Democratic Party ticket."

"This machine no longer respects the views and convictions of Virginia people who have in the past supported the Democratic Party. The leaders of this machine no longer acknowledge any interest in or loyalty to the Democratic Party as a great national institution.

"We believe that the Democrats of Virginia have a right to expect something more from those whom they have honored in the past and that it is now in order for the great mass of Democrats in the Commonwealth to assert themselves in no uncertain way. In keeping with numerous requests which have come to me, plans are now being made for the organization of a campaign for and on behalf of the straight Democratic ticket.

"Announcement of the opening of a State headquarters and the perfecting of an organization to carry on a campaign will be made in due time."

Military Emphasis

Foreign Policy Under The Brass

THE ALSOP BROTHERS did a useful job in one of their recent columns by calling attention to the fact that the National Security Council has taken over the control of American foreign policy.

The council is composed of the Secretaries of State, Defense, War, Navy and Air and the chairman of the National Security Resources Board. Generals Wedemeyer and Norstad, Admiral Struble and George Kennan of the State Department are chiefly responsible for the plans which it considers.

The council passes on all important questions in this country's international relations and decides the policy to be adopted. It has now been given authority by the President to determine our political objectives in every part of the world.

The explanation is offered that since the President is the final arbiter, and the council's members are civilian heads of executive departments, the civil viewpoint is not subordinated to that of the armed services.

That explanation will not bear analysis.

NO PRESIDENT since General Grant has had such childlike faith in the omniscience of the high brass as the present occupant of the White House. It is no surprise to learn that President Truman invariably approves every decision of the council.

Of his 45 years of outstanding service, Secretary Marshall has spent all but the last three as a professional soldier. At the age of 68 he cannot lose the military impress of a lifetime. During this generation our country has had no abler nor more devoted public servant than James Forrestal. Yet, as Secretary of Defense, it is his obligation to place military considerations first, and these considerations must equally prevail with the heads of the three service departments who sit with him on the council.

Those who have served in our Government in a national emergency recognize the need for a council composed of the top officials responsible for foreign policy and national defense. By making possible their close collaboration, and the coordination of their activities, such an agency as the National Security Council can insure the efficient implementation of defense policy and prevent the repetition of such an unnecessary disaster as Pearl Harbor.

But no emergency can justify the control of this country's foreign policy by a council which reaches its decisions from a military standpoint.

THE MILITARY concept of foreign policy is necessarily based upon the use of force. It attributes little value to such other important factors as the influence of ideas and of emotion, of the interplay of economic relations. It would not apprehend the ultimate advantage often to be gained from negotiations in which neither side can claim a total victory.

Should the military concept continue to govern American foreign policy we will face a further danger. The old isolationism has at least learned that we cannot withdraw from the world. The new isolationism holds that international cooperation is a fantasy and that the United States must run the world single-handed. No stauncher advocates of that doctrine will be found than in the armed services.

In the world of today our foreign policy cannot succeed unless it is backed by power. But neither will our foreign policy succeed if it envisages the use of force as its sole means of implementation.

In 1942 the United States needed to secure air bases and port facilities in a great South American republic for its projected invasion of North Africa. The republic's chief authorities assured us that if they had time to prepare public opinion and to prevent internal dissension, arrangements would be made.

A satisfactory solution was already in sight when I received while acting Secretary of State, an urgent call from the Secretary of War to say that he and the Chief of Staff insisted that the United States should immediately occupy the desired areas by force. The military objective was so compelling that they had lost sight of other values. Had they possessed the power to decide policy we would have lost the support of one of our most loyal allies, and the resentment of our other Latin-American neighbors would have been so violent that we would no longer have had the invaluable safeguard of a united and friendly hemisphere.

A fatal mistake was avoided because President Roosevelt consistently refused to permit those charged with military prosecution of the war to decide questions of foreign policy.

SHOULD SUCH a question come before the National Security Council can it be doubted that the demands of the military would prevail?

We have mounting evidence of the harm done by the predominance of the military viewpoint in our foreign policy in such cases as Palestine, Panama, the Pacific trusteeships, the Italian colonies, Germany and reparations.

The shadow of totalitarianism now darkens the world. There can be no liberalism in any national policy which is determined by the military. And if liberalism vanishes from the national policy of the United States, the battle for western civilization will be lost.

The Alsop brothers express the belief that if Governor Dewey becomes President he will "make maximum use" of the National Security Council as "an extraordinarily effective instrument of Government."

I think most Americans will hope on the contrary that, should Governor Dewey be elected, he will restore the control of foreign policy to the civil authorities designated by the Constitution, and limit the National Security Council to the coordinating functions for which alone it is qualified.

Discrimination Hurts South, Says Thomas

Austin, Tex., Sept. 27 (AP).—Socialist presidential candidate Norman Thomas tonight offered the South a program directed toward the "general winning of plenty, peace and freedom."

In a speech at Wooldridge Park here, the candidate said that such a program "necessarily means an end of discriminations which have adversely affected the South and a profound change in the system of capitalist exploitation of which the South in certain respects has been peculiarly the victim."

Thomas and President Truman crossed paths here today, but they did not meet. The Socialist candidate stood with a small group of party members in the crowd that heard Mr. Truman speak from the rear platform of his campaign train this morning.

He said he thought the reception accorded the President was friendly but not enthusiastic.

"By no means is prejudice, racial or otherwise, confined to the South," Thomas said.

"It was not a Southern, but a national failure of mind and conscience which brought it to pass that in the United States alone of western nations did it take the clumsy and brutal surgery of war to remove the cancer of cattel slavery."

He indorsed the proposals of President Truman's civil rights committee and said he believed the President deserves credit for standing by his committee.

To Aid in D. C. Slum Clearance

The Washington chapter of the Unitarian Fellowship of Social Justice last night voted to apoint a committee to work with other civic groups in Washington in efforts to eliminate slum areas of the city.

James M. Montgomery, chairman of the Community Welfare Council for Census Tract No. 48, spoke before the group and exhibited photographs of actual living conditions in the substandard sections of the tract.

The Welfare Council has been promised support by the Urban League, Social Welfare of the Federation of Churches, East Central Civic Association and other groups in a clean-up campaign in the area expected to get under way in a few weeks.

D.C. Courts Ask $156 Thousand More for 1950

The District Commissioners were asked yesterday to approve a $2,146,323 budget to run the courts here during fiscal year 1950.

According to the estimates of the court officials, it will cost some $156,000 more to administer justice here next year than during the current fiscal year.

Salary increases for employes, new equipment and a recent law increasing daily payments for jurors from $4 to $5 accounted for a large part of the increases.

The budget requests follow:

District Court, one million dollars; Municipal Court, $530,400; Juvenile Court, $278,000; Municipal Court of Appeals, $76,200; Probation System, $57,914; Register of Wills, $162,772; Commission on Mental Health, $41,037.

An increase in business was cited by every department.

Juvenile Court asked for $10,000 for microfilming court records and Municipal Court said it may decide to use that space-saving technique during the year.

The Probation Officer, as well as the Register of Wills, pointed to an overworked staff in requesting increases.

The smallest requested increase, that of the Municipal Court of Appeals, amounted to $1000 over the current appropriation.

The Juvenile Court, which had but 7482 hearings in 1946, stated that there has been a steady increase in cases, estimating 10,039 cases in 1949 and 10,487 in 1950. In one field alone, that of establishing paternity and settling support of children born out of wedlock, the traffic has doubled. In 1946, there were 207 of these cases. By 1950, there will be 475, it was estimated.

Probation system officials asked for allocation of funds to install dictaphones, stating that press of business will otherwise necessitate adding additional personnel to the present staff of 15.

The Register of Wills said that there are now five CAF positions, two of which can't be filled properly because of the low salary offered. He asked that these positions be reclassified upward.

The million dollars asked by the District Court is set by Federal law, and represents one half the costs of that court. The United States provides the rest.

Georgia Moves To Open Ballot

Atlanta, Sept. 27 (AP).—A move to throw the Georgia general election ballot open to presidential candidates of all parties got a quick send-off today at a special legislative session.

A bill to give the voters their choice among the regular Democrates, States' Righters, People's Progressive, Communist or other parties was offered in the Senate minutes after the session opened.

It received a unanimously favorable report from the committee on the state of the Republic. That action put it up for second reading in the Senate tomorrow with the prospect that it would reach the House by Wednesday.

Under Georgia's present law, only parties that polled at least 5 per cent of the votes in the preceding election or present petitions signed by 5 per cent of the voters can get on the general election ballot. The new bill would waive the 5 per cent requirement for candidates for President and Vice President but retain it for all State offices.

It would allow Georgia Democrats so desiring to vote for someone else than Mr. Truman for President and still go down the line for Democratic nominees for State jobs.

Truman Backers Start Louisiana Petition

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 27 (U.P.). President Truman's supporters tonight started collecting signatures to a petition that will put the President's name back on the Louisiana general election ballot in November.

Gov. Earl Long said he thought Mr. Truman's supporters ought to get the required 100 signatures "easy." They have until October 5. But when their petition is complete they still cannot have electors for Mr. Truman and his running mate, Senator Alben Barkley, listed as "Democrats." The new State law making it possible for Mr. Truman to get back on the ballot specifically forbids that.

States' Rights Units In 37 Va. Counties

Richmond, Va., Sept. 27 (AP).—Headquarters of Virginia States' Rights Democrats reported today the Thurmond-Wright cause has chartered clubs or organizations in 37 Virginia counties and cities with an enrolled membership of 28,000 actual members.

Segregation in Diner Upheld

Baltimore, Sept. 27 (AP).—A three-judge of Federal Court ruled today that segregation of Negroes in dining cars on Southern railroads is legal because there is no real inequality in treatment of different races.

One of the judges dissented. The other two found the dining car regulations do not discriminate when they require that Negroes eat at tables in a curtained section near the kitchen.

Judges William C. Coleman and W. Calvin Chesnut said:

"Racial segregation of interstate passengers is not forbidden by any provision of the Federal Constitution, the Interstate Commerce Act or any other act of Congress as long as there is no real inequality of treatment of those of different races."

Pro-Charter Reply Filed

The Montgomery County Charter Committee, Charter Board and Board of Election Supervisors filed their brief in the pending case on charter constitutionality yesterday with the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The brief is an answer to the action of Hubert Schneider, Bethesda attorney, who charged the proposed charter is unconstitutional. Charter advocates rest their case on three points: first, that no court has jurisdiction over the charter issue because the plan is still only a proposal and not yet law; second, that the controversial budget adoption is an ordinance power rather than legislation; and third, that any court action affecting one part of the charter leaves the remainder unaffected.

No FBI Comment on Story Of Widespread Wire Tapping

The Federal Bureau of Investigation declined comment on charges published by the New York Star yesterday that the FBI is tapping wires to record "private messages of hundreds of Americans."

"We wouldn't choose to dignify such stuff with an answer or any comment whatever," said an official at FBI headquarters here.

In a copyrighted article by Guy Richards, the Star asserted "wires are being tapped all around town" in "large cities like New York and Washington."

"Tapped two ways, at their homes and offices," said the paper, "have been such notables as Col. 'Bertie' McCormick, John L. Lewis, Jim Farley, the late newspaper-owning Pattersons, Joe and 'Cissy'; Harry Bridges, Jesse Jones and Philip Murray." The Star says it got its information from about 18 "former (FBI) agents who have had the pleasure of listening to them talk for hours."

Democrats, GOP Promoted Crisis, Wallace Implies

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 27 (U.P.).—Henry A. Wallace, in effect, accused President Truman and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey tonight of promoting the Berlin crisis to justify their "war economy" program.

"This latest crisis is an absolute necessity for them as a justification for the draft and armaments spending," he said. "This crisis is the logical outcome of phony crises which have preceded it."

The Progressive Party presidential candidate prefaced his statement by saying the U. N.'s biggest job was to keep the Berlin crisis from growing into a shooting war.

"Censure of the Russians, or of other parties who may have broken agreements is not the solution," he said.

Johnson Requests Justice Black To Stay Ballot Ban

Representative Lyndon Johnson (D., Tex.) yesterday asked Justice Black of the Supreme Court to stay the execution of a lower Federal Court order which is keeping his name off the ballot in Texas as Democratic nominee for United States Senator.

Justice Black agreed to hear attorneys for Johnson at a closed session in his chambers sometime today.

D. C. Building Permits Exceed Busy '47 Rate

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington construction plans continued at a high rate of activity in the first eight months this year, according to a survey by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Local building permits filed in the first eight months this year totaled $33,816,695 compared with $33,437,749 in the same period last year, the research agency reported. This city ranked thirteenth among 25 leading cities in this respect.

For 215 cities the value of building permits for the first eight months of 1948 rose to an all-time high of $2,683,651,975. This was 44.7 per cent more than the $1,854,851,286 for the like period a year ago. It was more than 2½ times the 1941 figure of $1,032,976,692, Dun & Bradstreet said.

Listed below are 25 cities having the largest permit valuations for the first eight months this year, with comparative figures for the previous year:

	Eight Months — 1948	1948
New York	$335,759,999	$266,811,210
Los Angeles	281,231,545	144,928,797
Detroit	99,667,462	92,572,988

OWENS

RUMORS BELIED: No sharp break in the used car market is in sight, Charles Hillard of Fort Worth, Tex., former president of the National Used Car Dealers Association, says. He presented a country-wide analysis of automotive trade conditions to bear out his belief, at the opening session of the association's annual convention in New York City. While denying rumors of overstocking, he said a seasonal price decline of about 3 per cent is under way—about equal to that in the fall of 1947.

BOND SALES HEAVY: The 12 Federal Reserve banks continued to be heavy buyers of Government bonds during the week ended September 22, a Federal Reserve Board report showed. Reserve authorities are committed to a policy of buying Government bonds in order to maintain their market prices at par or slightly better. Many of the $489,232,000 in Government bonds absorbed by the 12 banks during the week were believed to have been sold by Reserve Sysem member banks as a means of getting cash to meet higher reserve fund requirements.

EARNINGS: Baltimore & Ohio Railroad reported net income of $2,507,919 in August and $14,400,566 for the first eight months this year, compared with $600,487 in August, 1947, and $6,506,494 in the first eight months last year. Other earnings reports:

Obesity Seen As Insurance Cost Factor

Possibility that the overly fat may some day be barred from life insurance, or pay higher premiums for their policies, was foreseen here yesterday by a specialist in obesity.

Dr. Joseph H. Barach, associate professor of medicine at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, told physicians assembled here of results of studies recently completed by life insurance actuarians. He spoke at opening-day session of the three-day, 19th annual scientific assembly of the District Medical Society.

"Up to four or five years ago," said Dr. Barach, "the usual custom of life insurance companies was to consider the actuarial tables (from which insurance risks are determined) for indices of normal body weight."

Different Yardstick Used

He pointed out that these tables were found too all-inclusive; that a "better yardstick" has been found in weight records of only those who lived the longest, and that these records show up the obese as poor insurance risks.

Out of these maximum longevity tables compiled by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., he said, has come the conclusion that persons most likely to live the longest "do not exceed the body weight they attained at the age of 25." Anything more than 10 per cent above that is "beyond normal," he said.

Dr. Barach advocated only one best way to reduce—eat less. Declaring exercise and reducing drugs are ineffective, he declared:

"The one thing that remains is, as it was in the beginning, a low maintenance diet and the determination to attain results by both patient and doctors."

He calculated such reducing diets to be "somewhere between 50 and 75 per cent of a basal diet for a person's individual needs, "a diet with which to prevent physical deterioration." The physician determines the diet, but it is up to the patient to follow through with it.

As to exercise's effect on overweight, he pointed out that to use up 1 pound of fat "a person would need to walk 66½ miles, or saw wood for 10½ hours, or foxtrot for 16 hours, or climb to the top of the Washington Monument 48 times."

The reward for self-regimen in diet is great, he said.

"As a reward for successful weight reduction or prevention of obesity," he told assembled physicians, "we may say to these patients that by a return to normal body weight they will delay or prevent the onset of chronic cardiovascular disease such as hypertension, arteriosclerosis in its various forms, certain diseases of the liver and gall bladder, arthritis and above all, diabetes."

"Burpers" Warned

Dr. William F. Burdick, Washington baby specialist and associate professor of pediatrics of Georgetown University School of Medicine, gave physicians and parents advice on infant feeding, including a warning that "baby burping" is too prevalent a practice.

The procedure, used to make babies erupt gas during and after feedings, he said, may be one cause of "spitting up or vomiting." "Burping," he advised, should only be done if the infant shows signs of discomfort.

His other tips to parents included: Introduce new foods cautiously; don't make him eat, but encourage him to eat by letting his natural appetite come to the surface; serve him less than he will eat, not more; don't offer bribes for eating.

Also, let him feed himself as early as possible; allow him only the amount of milk he wants, not the amount you think he ought to have, and refrain from strict schedules and routines, "they can be overdone to the detriment of both the mother and the baby."

New Test Found for Syphillis

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Scientists at Johns Hopkins University have succeeded in keeping alive the spirochete, or organism, of syphilis outside the human body, it was announced here yesterday.

Significance of the long-sought feat was emphasized by Dr. Joseph E. Moore, associate professor of medicine there, who listed its potentialities as:

1. Most immediate the likelihood of finding a new, specific test for syphilis, "more simple and more efficient than present blood tests (Wassermann tests) with their present high percentage of false positives."

2. In the more distant future—the possibility of developing a vaccine to prevent the disease by "mass vaccination of infants."

Dr. Moore, noted authority on venereal diseases, spoke here yesterday at opening technical session of the nineteenth annual Scientific Assembly of the District Medical Society. Several thousand physicians and members of allied professions were registered for the three-day conferences, at Hotel Statler.

Dr. Moore further reported success in curing syphillis in its early stages with large, one-shot doses of procaine penicillin, and "almost 100 per cent success" in preventing syphillis in the unborn child of a diseased mother by penicillin injections of the mother during pregnancy.

He also foresaw "some hope" that penicillin may some day be taken orally by man as a prophylaxis against future contact with syphillis or gonorrhea. Describing laboratory success with rabbits in tests of the prophylactic qualities of the antibiotic, he added: "It is expected the armed forces will investigate these findings."

Throughout medicine's history of its fight against syphilis the medical men have been hampered by the fact that its spirochete lived but briefly, about 15 seconds, outside the human body.

Education Office Shift Requested

Establishment of the office of education as an independent agency, headed by a policy-making board of laymen appointed by the President with Senate consent, was recommended yesterday to a conference of the American Association of School Administrators.

Removal of the office from the Federal Security Agency was recommended by presidents of State associations of school administrators to the Chicago conference, it was announced here last night.

The recommendation came hard on the heels of a controversy between John W. Studebaker, former education commissioner, and FSA Administrator Oscar Ewing. Studebaker, last month, accused Ewing of hindering exposure in schools of the tactics of communism.

Youth Authority Urged Before Bar

Creation by the next Congress of a Federal Youth Authority would go far toward rehabilitating more than 70 per cent of youth offenders now developing into hardened criminals.

That assertion was made last night at the annual dinner of the Federal Bar Association, held at the Mayflower Hotel in honor of the members of the thirty-first Annual Judicial Conference of the United States. The conference is made up of the chief judges of the 11 United States Courts of Appeal.

The speaker was Orie L. Phillips, Chief Judge of the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals at Denver, Colo. In the audience were Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson, the Associate Justices of the United States Supreme Court and nearly 500 other judges and distinguished members of the bar from the District and throughout the country.

Long Pending in Congress

Judge Phillips pleaded for passage of an act for the treatment of youth offenders which has been introduced in succeeding sessions of Congress, but never gone further than the pending stage. Introduced in the Eightieth Congress by Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) as S-857 and in the House by Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.), it provides for a Federal Youth Authority "to substitute for retributive punishment, methods of training and treatment designed to correct and prevent antisocial tendencies."

Approved by the Judicial Conference itself, the bill "departs from the mere punitive idea of dealing with criminals and looks ordinarily to the objective idea of rehabilitation," Judge Phillips said.

Courts would be empowered to sentence to the authority convicted youth offenders the judges believe would be benefited by special treatment by the authority.

The authority, Judge Phillips explained, could then in its discretion either free the offender conditionally under supervision; assign him to a designated type of agency or institution for treatment, or confine him under such conditions best designed for the protection of the public.

"If America is to be saved," said Judge Phillips, "it will largely be due to the courage, fidelity, devotion and patriotism of American youth. The problem of that unfortunate part of our young men who fall into antisocial tendencies can be solved.

"Instead of 70 per cent of our youth offenders developing into hardened criminals, more than 70 per cent can be rehabilitated and made useful members of society. What a saving—in dollars, in human values and in strengthening the foundations of our society!"

To Make Three Awards

Charles Oliphant, president of the bar association and chief counsel of the Internal Revenue Bureau, formally announced that, sometime next year, the association will begin presentation of three annual, nation-wide awards to attorneys for outstanding services.

U. S. Judges' Health Periled By Overwork

The health of Federal Court judges is being seriously impaired by overwork, it was reported yesterday.

Henry P. Chandler, director of the administrative office of the United States Court, said more judges are desperately needed on the Federal bench. His report was made at the annual judicial conference in the Supreme Court Building.

Justice is being delayed and the "interests of the public . . . is suffering because of the overburden on the number of judges now on the bench," he said.

"Judges under prolonged strain to keep up with their dockets are likely to develop a nervous tension which impairs their health, perhaps permanently," Chandler said.

A number of Federal judges have been ill for long periods in the past year, he reported. Among these were "not a few whose breakdown seemed to be directly related to overstrain in their work."

"There are other judges appointed comparatively recently," Chandler said, "who started strong and vigorous, but who are already beginning to show signs of nervous exhaustion."

Chandler's report summarized work of the Federal bench during the last year. It showed that bankruptcy cases, which increased 30 per cent last year, increased another 40 per cent during the past year.

The number of juvenile delinquency cases went down 20 per cent. All kinds of private civil cases were on the increase. These are the ones, Chandler said, which have caused Federal judges to fall behind in their work and contributed to the serious overburdon on the Federal court system.

One on the Aisle—

Traveler Norris Likes 'Snake Pit'

By Richard L. Coe

MOST EXCITED traveler to get back home these days is Glen Norris, Twentieth Century's local bigwig, who's just been out in Hollywood for a looksee at the home lot. . . . It was a busy stay, but Glen's still excited about Twentieth's Academy Award entry, "The Snake Pit." . . . Olivia de Havilland and Mark Stevens are the stars of this one and Olivia's make-believe has the studio in a tizzy. . . . "It's the most important picture ever produced by Twentieth Century-Fox," enthuses Norris, which is a pretty dangerous remark for a man to make. . . . New York will see it in November—always the stretch in the Academy Derby—and the Palace will get it on F st. around the end of the year. . . . Never say the studios don't plan for the future. . . . The next year's release schedule includes 32 pictures, of which 20 have already been before the cameras and 12 are ready for the exhibitors. . . . Three are being made abroad: "I Was a Male War Bride," starring Cary Grant and Ann Sheridan, is being filmed in Germany, France and England; "Prince of Foxes," with Tyrone Power and Orson Welles, took them to Italy, and "Affairs of Adelaide" finds Maureen O'Hara and Dana Andrews working in Britain. . . . But it's back to his Washington office for the busy, bright Glen Norris.

LIVELIEST HIPS of the traveler crop must be those of Marion Venable, who writes cryptically from Hawaii a note I hesitate to make public before she translates in person. . . . Marion's due back next week to resume her Ballet Soiree and school of theatrical dancing and there's no doubt in the world she'll be bristling with grass-skirt undulations. . . . On the way out Miss Venable dropped into studios of her contemporaries on the West Coast and reports a deal of civic activity in the dance. . . . But it's Hawaii she's found "Paradise," where she's snooping all over the islands for this winter's material.

MOST SERIOUS of the returned travelers probably are Vincent Daugherty and Horton Foote, who are presenting their "Productions, Incorporated," this season at the Institute of Contemporary Arts, 1322 New York ave. nw. . . . Five plays will be offered in the PI series, to be selected from such pets of the avant-garde as Sartre, Gertrude Stein, Lorca and Auden and such influential oldsters as Chekhov and Strindberg. . . . Also on the Institute of Contemporary Arts schedule is a series of Friday night film revivals, which, as outlined, looks good: D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance" opens the series October 8, with a Grierson trio, "Nanook of the North" and "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" set to follow. . . . Past experience with film revivals suggests this list is "subject to change."... I hope not.

BEST LISTENING of the show world caught by the record folk this season is Ethel Merman's new album for Decca . . . Could be you don't like Ethel (in which case you probably dine on worms), but if, like me, there's nothing that kindles your eardrums like the sound of Ethel's lusty pipes, this album's for you . . . On its five discs Ethel sings "You're the Top," "I Get a Kick Out of You" and "Blow, Gabriel," from Cole Porter's "Anything Goes"; "It's De-Lovely," from "Red, Hot and Blue"; "Life Is Just a Bowl of Cherries," from the "Scandals of 1931" (sic.); "I Got Rhythm," from "Girl Crazy," and "Eadie Was a Lady," from "Take a Chance." . . . You should hear that Merman gal sing such a word as "Tinpantithesis." . . Oh, my bursting eardrums.

BEST READING these weeks of memoirs theatrical comes from Billie Burke, who's telling a good deal of her life as Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld in Colliers, of which the final third comes out tomorrow . . . The red locks of Billie cover a witty, refreshingly candid brain, and you'll find the ring of truth in what she has to say about such glamour girls as Olive Thomas and Marilyn Miller, who had the Ziegfeld yen bad . . . Miss Burke's are the breeziest theatrical memories imaginable.

BEST LAUGH of radio listening came Sunday night from the same Louella Parsons whom Nip Nelson is mimicking so sharply at the Capitol this week . . . Louella was wheezing into the mike about how Hollywood received both President Truman and Governor Dewey within a few hours . . . Including more names of stars on the Dewey platform than she did of those on the Truman stage (a trend, Louella?), Lolly went on to pipe: "All Hollywood cheered when Governor Dewey said he would jail all Communists who break the law" . . . What Governor would do with the rest of us who break the law, Lolly didn't say.

MOST WELCOME telegram of the year: The Columbia is to revive "A Night at the Opera," the Marx Brothers classic, next week . . . Oh, happy, happy day!

THIS PEEKABOO girl is also a busy one. The eyes belong to Loretta Young, as she looks in the role of Berengaria for Cecil B. DeMille's "The Crusades," being revived Thursday at the Metropolitan. Loretta also stars with Robert Mitchum and William Holden in "Rachel and the Stranger," opening tomorrow at Keith's

Permanent Industrial Safety Organization Goal of Conference Here at Truman's Call

Means to check what President Truman terms the "great national tragedy" of industrial accidents were sought here yesterday at the opening of the President's Conference on Industrial Safety.

An appeal, on both humanitarian and preparedness grounds, "to reduce the tragedy and waste of two million industrial accidents a year," was made by the President, who had directed the Secretary of Labor to call the first national meeting of its kind.

Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman read a telegram from Mr. Truman which, he said, was sent from the special train in the West.

In it, the President declared:

"Every year 16,000 to 18,000 workers lose their lives, and 90,000 more are permanently crippled in industrial accidents. This great national tragedy must be stopped."

Attending the three-day conference are 400 representatives of industry, labor and State and Federal agencies. Between now and Wednesday they are scheduled to develop a permanent national industrial safety organization, which will hold an action conference here from March 30 to April 1, 1949.

Steelman, in discussing effects of industrial accidents on national production, said that despite virtual "full employment" in the country now, "it is estimated that we shall need some 300,000 more workers by next July in the aircraft, shipbuilding, munitions and other related industries.

"We know that America's overall manpower reserves should be adequate to meet this need," he said, "but the job injuries occurring last year alone deprived us of the production of 2½ times this number."

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin told the conference that this year marks the end of a "40-year struggle" to obtain workmen's compensation laws in every State.

But only about half the Nation's workers, he said, are actually covered by such laws even today.

Former Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, now a member of the Civil Service Commission, called for restoring authority of the Labor Department to open training courses for State factory inspectors, upon the request of States. This, she told the conference, was denied by Congress in the last departmental appropriation act.

Other speakers yesterday were Admiral Ross T. McIntire, USN (Ret.), who discussed over-all needs to aid the physically handicapped; Charles Sattler, president of the International Association of Governmental Labor Officials, and Carl B. Jansen, president of the Dravo Corp. of Pittsburgh, Pa., who said management "must and will" successfully fill its safety obligations to workers.

Today's session will be occupied by committee meetings on such subjects as safety education, labor-management cooperation, laws and regulations, etc. These committees will report at the final session Wednesday.

Yale Club to Elect

The monthly meeting of the Yale Club of Washington will be held today at 12:30 p. m. at the Lafayette Hotel. Eugene Zuckert, assistant secretary of the Air Forces, will be the speaker. There will also be an election of officers for the coming year.

Inspections Bureau Asks Budget Hike

The District's population increase, and an increase of more than 200 per cent in the number of building permits issued during the past four years, have forced the budget for the District Department of Inspections upward.

This was disclosed yesterday when the budget was released by the District Commissioners. It asks for $687,765 to spend during the 1950 fiscal year, or $25,165 more than has been appropriated for the current fiscal year.

The engineering section of the department asks for an additional engineer because of changes in building and zoning regulations in recent months which have reduced volume of produced work, and because an increase in large and commercial projects has put the section two months behind in its work.

Because the new Egress Regulations become effective January 1, 1949, the Fire Safety Inspection Section is requesting four new inspectors for its work. The regulations will require that all buildings in the District be subject to inspection. The department estimates an average of four inspections per man per day.

Two new electrical inspectors are asked because of the increase in new construction, increase in use of such appliances as television and deterioration of electrical installations by "unusually hard usage during the past several years."

The department consists of inspection work in building, plumbing, electricity, elevators, fire prevention, smoke and boilers and engineering.

39 Areas Now Participating In County Improvement Plan

Prince Georges County has invested $800,000 in a special improvement program through which local communities are enabled to receive urban-type facilities by becoming special taxing areas, the county's Chamber of Commerce was told last night.

William A. Carson, president of the county board of commissioners, described progress of the special improvements program which was inaugurated in 1941 as a "war baby." Altogether, 39 communities have been set up as special taxing districts, Carson said.

Under the program, established by a special act of the State Legislature, communities may become special improvement districts if 51 per cent of their residents apply for the privilege, Carson said. Improvements are financed by the county, which eventually is repaid through special assessments extending over a long period.

Included among facilities which have been provided by the program are streets, sewage, electric lights, garbage and trash collection and, in some instances, fire-fighting equipment, Carson said.

Legal aspects of the special improvements program were outlined briefly by Waldo Burnside, attorney for the commissioners, who pointed out that the improvements cannot be "imposed" on the people by the commissioners or by any other local officials, but must be initiated by residents of local communities.

About 125 members attended the meeting at the Prince Georges Country Club, where a dinner inaugurated the trade body's fall and winter program.

The Knotts all pitched in to make the family business a success!

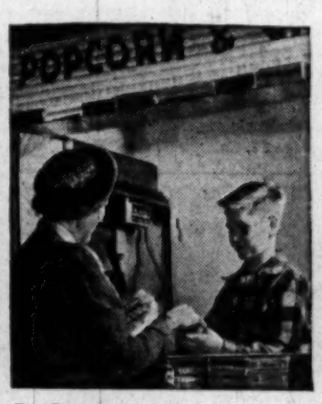
The depression hit them hard in 1931! Maynard Knott was glad enough then to pour concrete at $3 a day. Raising a growing family was a struggle even when he got extra summer work running a movie machine. But a business of their own was what they really wanted. Finally they had the chance to buy a little movie theatre. The family ran it; Knott kept his regular job. By pitching in together they saved the money to buy a lot for a bigger, better theatre . . .

Owner-Manager Maynard Knott designed and helped build the new Clay Theatre, only movie in Clayton, N. C. Its Grand Opening in 1947 proved his ability to finish what he starts.

"Junior partner" Julia-Ann, the Knotts' 15-year-old daughter, takes her turn at the ticket window. She helps at home, too . . . takes care of her baby sister . . . really enjoys housework!



Son Dan, 14, took over as manager of popcorn and candy sales. Profits are his for college. Running the theatre itself someday is his big ambition.

Expert manager! Besides helping in the theatre office, Mrs. Knott enjoys making the children's clothes, most of her own; and still finds time to teach in Sunday School.

By lab work at Meredith College, Raleigh, plus savings from three years as theatre cashier, daughter Jackie helps pay her way towards biology degree.

Their garden supplies enough vegetables for them to eat, canned or fresh, all year. They spend $23 cash a week on food for six; $8 for clothes; $3 for recreation; live on about $4200 a year. Money after expenses and some savings goes to church and to several charities.

Money problems are always worked out by the Knotts together. On important matters their life insurance agent helps them. Life insurance, Mr. Knott will tell you, helped him get his business . . . helps protect his family. His $18,000 life insurance program includes some term to cover a debt, takes $23.35 a month. In spite of these uncertain times, says Mr. Knott, "we're getting along towards success. Our secret? We all pitch in and do our share. We all get a kick out of helping each other!"

The future looks bright to baby Janice, too! They're saving for her education as well as for a roomier house!

THE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES AND THEIR AGENTS

BRING YOU THIS STORY BECAUSE... families like the Knotts show us one way that happiness is earned! You, yourself, probably know a family, right in your own town, that is getting ahead in the same typically American way. Such families prove to all of us that we can solve our own problems by our own efforts. ! ! ! Their example shows too why it is so important for us to hold to our rights to think for ourselves, to work at what we like, to live as we choose. For what this country amounts to depends upon what happens to its homes!

Nats, Chisox Take Shots at Bosox, Tribe Today

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

BACK IN JUNE when the Indians were breezing along in first place, with Bob Lemon and Gene Bearden the pitching sensations and Joe Gordon and Larry Doby hitting home runs, Lou Boudreau wasn't deluding himself. He said, "Bob Feller will win the pennant for us, or we won't win it."

POVICH

He was saying, in effect, that his Indians were nice guys but not good enough, without a powerful lift from Rapid Robert. All his chips were on Feller. At that particular period, Boudreau couldn't be credited with holding a strong hand on his bid for the jackpot, if he was viewing Feller as his hole card. Beating Feller was one of the most popular pastimes in the American League.

On Boudreau's basis it was all right with the other pennant-minded clubs. The 1948 Feller didn't have it. He wasn't pitching as good ball as Lemon or Breadon. That fast ball was fraying, and the Feller curve was too wide too often. He wasn't the stable performer of past seasons, and he had other than his pitching troubles. Mrs. Feller was desperately ill, and her husband was taking that worry to the mound with him.

YET, BEFORE the All-Star game, when it was presumed Rapid Robert would be one of American League pitchers against the National, Bucky Harris was preparing to start him despite his sorry record. Before Feller asked out, Harris was aligning his pitching assignments for the game. He was asked if Feller would start.

"What do you think?" rejoined Harris. "Anybody who has Feller available has got to start him. When you want to win a ball game, you pitch Feller and make no apologies. I don't care what his record it. Who's a better bet to win a ball game than Feller?"

Harris' Yankees in particular had been beating Feller, but until they licked him there was still high respect for him. Harris wouldn't sell short a guy who always had been a big winner. He didn't share Boudreau's high faith that Feller would snap out of his slump but he could understand Boudreau's willingness to go along with the man.

Well, Feller has won his last six starts. The Indians are back on top. If they win the pennant, and they ought to, the identity of the man who won it for 'em will be clear enough.

YOU NOTICED the other day, perhaps, that Feller pitched the Indians into the exclusive league lead by beating the Tigers with what the papers said was "a wicked curve ball." There was little mention of his fast one, and that fact recalled the expression of Tris Speaker, who was traveling with the Indians a month ago.

"He's wild with his curve ball, that's all," said Speaker. "His control is off, and he's behind the hitters too much and they know he's coming in with the fast one that isn't as fast as it used to be, and that's the pitch they're powdering. All he needs is the control he used to have with that curve ball. They won't touch him when that happens."

Feller has been pitching in recent weeks with the mark of a champion. He's been winning the pivotal games, like the one against the Tigers when a defeat would have dumped the Indians painfully behind. In this last week of the season, the Indians have to be conceded an edge over the Red Sox and Yankees as long as Boudreau has Feller available to toss into the big games.

THEY ALL HAVE five games to play. In a pinch, Boudreau could shove Feller into three of those games, at least two, and if the Indians don't win the pennant Boudreau can always say it wasn't because he didn't thrust the league's best pitching arm forward. After games with the White Sox on Tuesday and Wednesday, the Indians are faced with an open date before the three wind-up affairs with the Tigers on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Feller could be wheeled in to the White Sox game Wednesday with two days rest. He's done that before and won. He'd be ready to face the Tigers Saturday or Sunday. And he wouldn't shirk at a relief job along the way. The Yankees and Red Sox have nothing to compare with Feller on a day when they have critical need for a winning pitcher.

And the schedule surely favors the Indians, with Boston and New York down for what could be another throat-cutting, two-game series at the end of the week. Anyway, it has boiled down to the point where, win or lose the pennant, the Indians will do it with Feller, exactly as Boudreau prophesied. But you have to like their chances of taking it all.

Hoyas Step Out Against B. C. Here Friday Night

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Boston College's high-flying Eagles swoop down on Griffith Stadium Friday night and it's up to Georgetown to shoot 'em down or suffer its second straight licking of the new football season.

Renewal of the Georgetown-B. C. rivalry kicks off the weekend collegiate season which also includes the first home appearance of George Washington's plucky Colonials.

With their first Southern Conference victory in two years, scored at the expense of VPI Saturday, already tucked away, the Colonials go for No. 2 against Virginia Military Institute at the Stadium Saturday.

Terps Meet Delaware

Maryland, which opened its season in Richmond Saturday with a 19-0 success, hits the road again. The Terps go up to Wilmington, where on Saturday evening they're expected to smack down Delaware U.

Although the Hoyas conducted an unsuccessful (18-7) crusade against Holy Cross last Saturday, Friday's Georgetown-B. C. clash is still a top-flight contest.

The Eagles launched their campaign last Friday evening by trouncing Wake Forest, 26-7, with the entire Georgetown team on hand to watch them do it.

Eagles Big, Beefy

As a result, it wasn't necessary for Hoya Coach Jack Hagerty to warn his squad of the prowess of the invaders at drills on the Hilltop yesterday.

The Eagles have one of the beefiest squads in the country. Twenty-four of their squad of 46 weigh 200 or more with Center Eddie Kennedy the biggest of the lot. This 24-year-old Tartar from Tamaqua, Pa., goes 6 feet 6 inches high and displaces 260 pounds.

To offset this latitudinal and longitudinal disadvantage, the Hoyas yesterday promoted Art Sheridan, 260-pound reserve guard to first string right tackle.

Sheridan, a red-headed sophomore from Providence, R. I., has already made quite a reputation on the Hoya campus, but not as a football player. He's a tenor of no little ability.

"If Art can't tackle 'em, maybe he can lullaby Boston College into defeat," Coach Hagerty said as he watched Sheridan in practice yesterday.

Georgetown's chances of an upset victory will depend chiefly on the arm of Quarterback Babe Baranowski. The Babe pitched the Hoyas to their only touchdown against Holy Cross. Georgetown didn't pass much against the Crusaders, but Baranowski will get ample opportunity to chuck to his heart's content against the massive Eagles Friday night.

GW, VMI Will Pass

There'll be plenty of passing at Griffith Stadium also in the GW-VMI game. The invading Keydets have one of the best hurlers in Dixieland in Quarterback Bobby Thomason.

Unwilling to add to the glowing reputation Thomason already owns, GW Coach Bo Rowland yesterday worked his Colonials overtime on pass defense. The results were not too satisfactory and more of same is on the docket for today and tomorrow.

In addition to their victory, the Redskins Give Macioszczyk His Release

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Retribution was swift and final for Fullback Art Macioszczyk, who almost cost the Washington Redskins their National Football Geague opener Sunday against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The 'Skins won, 17-14.

Macioszczyk, picked up from Philadelphia on waivers, got his unconditional release yesterday.

Washington's pro gridmen were left one player short of the limit at 34, but Macioszczyk's release was gratifying in at least two quarters.

"We're happy to detect weakness such as Macioszczyk's early in the season," said a Redskin spokesman. "We won't always be lucky enough to win in spite of them, like we did Sunday."

The other pleased parties were radio and newspapermen who sweated over the pronunciation and spelling of the 200-pounder's name.

Three fullbacks—Jim Castiglia, John Henry Hollar and Ed Quirk—were still on the 'Skin roster, plus a pair of versatile veterans who can be shifted to that spot. They are Tom Farmer and Dick Poillon.

Macioszczyk's boner was committed with less than a minute of the first half of Sunday's game remaining, and the score tied at 7-7. Johnny Clement had almost single-handedly moved

Short Stuff on Sports

Black Much Better but Still Doesn't Know What Happened

Cleveland, Sept. 27 (AP).—Cleveland Indian Pitcher Don Black, who suffered a brain hemorrhage September 13, has made the greatest recovery in the last 24 hours, Dr. Edward B. Castle, Cleveland club physician, said today.

Dr. Castle said the hurler has become more rational and now is "groping for thoughts." He still is not aware of the tribute paid him last Wednesday night at the stadium when approximately $40,000 was raised in his behalf in a game between Boston and Cleveland. He added that Black still doesn't know what happened to him or where he is, and that while he is now conscious most of the time he is "irrational."

Dr. Castle also said the injury probably ended Black's baseball career and that he might undergo surgery later on Black suffered his injury when he took a hard swing at a ball while batting in the September 13 game between the Indians and the St. Louis Browns.

Indians Shout

It's a Cinch 'We'll Win'

Cleveland, Sept. 27 (AP).—One game in front and five to play, the pennant-starved Cleveland Indians, from Owner Bill Veeck, Vice President Hank Greenberg and Manager Lou Boudreau down, were confident today that the Tribe would win the American League pennant.

"We'll win," said Veeck. "We'll win because we have the best team in the league."

"We'll win," said Greenberg. "We'll win because we have the best pitching staff in the league."

"We'll win," said Boudreau. "We'll win because we have Bob Feller."

"We'll win," echoed Satchel Paige. "We'll win 'cause we jest ain't gonna lose no more."

Boston Tickets

Boston, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox management today notified season ticket holders they would be given first crack at World Series ducats should the Sox win the American League pennant.

The Sox added no other applications for World Series tickets would be accepted until announcement of a general sale is made.

Cleveland Sale On

Cleveland, Sept. 27 (AP).—Baseball fans in Cleveland won't have to wait until 12:01 a. m. Tuesday before dropping their World Series ticket requests in the mail.

Cleveland Postmaster Guy R. Lucas has set up special letter containers in the lobby of the main postoffice.

Within four hours after the special letter containers were set up, 20,000 requests for World Series tickets were mailed.

'Jury Box' in Boston

Boston, Sept. 27 (AP).—For the first time in recent World Series history baseball fans will be able to buy unreserved bleacher seats before the day of the game, the Boston Braves announced today as they offered for sale tomorrow tickets for their first and second Boston games.

General Manager John J. Quinn said 1,500 "jury box" seats for each of these games would go on sale at $1 each at 10 a. m., Tuesday.

Lowly Teams Cast In Spoilers' Roles Of Tight Flag Race

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

On three widely scattered fronts, the Indians, Red Sox and Yankees continued their frenzied drive on the American League pennant anew today—with seventh-place Nats and last-place White Sox hauled into the pennant picture as well.

At Boston, where Washington opens a three-game series with the Red Sox, and at Cleveland, where the White Sox move in for two games, the two tail enders are projected into important roles as potential "spoilers."

The Yankees, like the Red Sox, trail the Indians by a full game with only five contests on the schedule for all three clubs, as the New Yorkers move into Philadelphia for their own important three-game series with the Athletics.

A gripe is being voice both by the Yankees and Red Sox, at this point. They're loud in their criticism of Clark Griffith, accusing him of telescoping the Washington club's schedule to leave his stadium free for football in the last week, thus compelling them to meet Philadelphia and Washington teams that have had four days rest.

The Nats move into Boston with a well-rested pitching staff, in contrast to the frayed status of the Boston pitching, and the Yankees have a similar plight at Philadelphia whose pitchers have had from four to six days rest.

Griffith declared the charges against him are "nonsense." He says, "We didn't double up on any games to make doubleheaders with the A's. The schedule merely worked out that way. Let them squawk their heads off."

Kuhel Starts Scarborough

For the opener at Boston today, Manager Joe Kuhel has readied Ray Scarborough (13-8), the club's top pitcher. The desperate Red Sox will start Joe Dobson, their own ace.

At Cleveland, Manager Lou Boudreau is shooting with Gene Beardon, the rookie left-hander who has turned in 17 wins for the Indians. Beardon will be facing Frank Papish, the mere two-game winner of the White Sox, who set the Yankees back in his last start.

At Philadelphia, the Yankees also will be thrusting their best pitching arm forward, with 19-game winner Vic Raschi opposing Carl Scheib or Lew Brissie.

For the Nats, it marks the second time in recent years when, as a second-division club, they helped decide a pennant. In 1944 they moved into Detroit to slap down the Tigers on Dutch Leonard's four-hit pitching and Stan Spence's home run, and swung the pennant to the Browns.

The Yankees, unlike the Red Sox and Indians, who play all of their remaining five games at home, will be strictly a road-club for the rest of the pennant race. After their three-game series with the A's, they move to Boston for the wind-up games Saturday and Sunday.

Cleveland, with its one-game lead, is rated as holding the strongest hand and Manager Lou Boudreau has already outlined the rest of his pitching program for the season. Bob Feller, with six straight, will move against the White Sox tomorrow night, and for the three-game wind-up with Detroit Boudreau will follow with his aces, Bob Lemon, Beardon and Feller.

The Indians are aware of one direct way of clinching the flag, no matter what may be the success of the Yankees and Red Sox from here in. They could clinch it by winning all of their five remaining games.

Vice President Hank Greenberg, of the Indians was quoted in Cleveland yesterday that "we could win all five and leave the Red Sox and Yankees crying. The pressure is squarely on the Sox and Yankees now, not us. If we lose only one, the worst we can get is tie.

"Remember this we are in the best position of all three clubs as far as pitching is concerned. Neither the Yankees nor the Red Sox can name their starting pitchers in their remaining five games and be reasonably certain they'll win.

"We have the advantage of knowing that Feller can start twice more. The same for Bearden. And we still have Lemon as the ace in the hole."

The Indians' only concern was wiped out today when X-rays revealed no break in Larry Doby's right elbow. The freshman outfielder is expected to be in the lineup in tomorrow night's game. Doby was hit on the elbow in Sunday's game with Detroit, by Hal Newhouser, who tried to pick him off second base.

Cleveland was confident it would not have to do any refunding on the sale of World Series tickets which begins tomorrow. Already thousands of requests have poured into special baskets at the main post office here.

Niahros Lost for Week or More

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—The New York Yankees, trailing the Cleveland Indians by a game in defense of their American League championship, today lost catcher Gus Niahros for the season's remaining five games because of a broken finger.

Niahros was injured in the eighth inning of yesterday's game with the Red Sox at Yankee Stadium. Dr. Sidney Gaynor, Yankee physician, said X-rays showed three linear fractures just behind the knuckle, of the index finger.

"Its not a serious fracture," Gaynor said, "but it would be nothing short of a miracle if he could catch in less than a week and it would be unusual if he could play within 10 days." The Yankees immediately called up Charles Silvera from Portland of the Pacific Coast League. Silvera will fly to Philadelphia in time to join the team for its game against the Athletics tomorrow.

Owner Mike Uline and Manager Paul Rothgeb of the Washington Lions, last night announced the purchase of Hank Goldup, 210-pound left winger from the Cleveland Barons.

Goldup, who played for the New York Rangers from 1942 to 1946 before joining the Barons, will report immediately to Kitchener, Ontario, where the Lions are in training.

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 27 (AP).—The San Antonio Missions of the Texas League have traded Outfielder Luke Majorki to Baltimore of the International League for First Baseman Ed Levy.

West Ready For Shapiro

All sorts of wonderful things were being planned for either Sonny Boy West of Maxie Shapiro, whichever wins tomorrow night's 10-round bout at Griffith Stadium, as the fighters put in their final tune-up licks.

West's lip, which was cut and caused postponement of the lightweight scrap for two days, was being protected by a special mask as he boxed four rounds in the gym. It was expected to be completely well by fight time.

To the winner of the bout, according to Promoter Goldie Ahearn, will go a match with a nationally known opponent to start the fall fight season. It might be Enrique Bolanos, hard-punching Californian, or even Beau Jack. The latter until now has refused to meet West, but indicates a willingness to face Shapiro.

Tomorrow's fight will be West's most important here, although he's faced such dangerous contenders as Jimmy McAllister and Danny Webb of Baltimore while winning 19 out of 21 bouts.

A contrast in styles will be presented with West going into his usual slambang routine and Shapiro, a product of New York, employing a cagey style with a lot of tricks only the veterans acquire.

Army-USC to Play

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Army and the University of Southern California have reached an agreement for a two-game football series in 1951 and 1952, Lieut. Col. W. G. Proctor, public information officer at the Military Academy, announced here today.

The first game will be played in New York City in November, 1951, with the return contest scheduled in the Los Angeles Coliseum the following year.

At Indian Spring

D. C. Open Scheduled Oct. 7 and 8

THE ANNUAL District of Columbia Open is set for the Indian Spring Club this year on October 7 and 8.

A pro-amateur has been woven in as part of the 36-hole medal play with a home club member play. Professionals may play with a home club member for the first 18 holes and use their scores both for the pro-am and for the open play. Prizes will be awarded for low gross best-ball and low net best-ball for both professionals and amateurs.

Entries will be received by Mel Shorey, the Indian Spring pro, until October 5. The entry fee is $5. At least $750 in prize money will be added to the entry fees.

BETHESDA NAVAL Medical Center is building a new golf course. It will be a six-hole layout which will rim the reservation in a U-shape.

Medical Center authorities expect it to be finished in time for next season's play. The course will be open to patients as well as Medical Center personnel and their dependents.

MRS. GEORGE H. BAILEY, Jr., who won the medal honors yesterday in the Washington Golf and Country Club women's championship golf tournament by shooting 93. Mrs. Charles Egenroad was next with 94.

Match play begins today. Pairings and qualifying scores:

Mrs. Bailey (93) vs. Mrs. Lloyd Dennis (97).

Mrs. A. G. Simmons (95) vs. Mrs. G. W. Calvert (99).

Mrs. Charles Egenroad (94) vs. Mrs. J. J. Corson (97).

Mrs. M. H. Deneen (96) vs. Miss Anne Reigh (103).

WOMENS GOLF tournaments sponsored by the Womens District Golf Association will be restricted in the future to women with handicaps of 26 or under.

The decision was made yesterday during meeting of the Association at the Woodmont Country Club.

The change will necessitate a revamping of the class divisions, probably moving some players currently in Class A into Class B.

New Surface Put on Oval For $350,000

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

To the $2 bettor—and the management blesses him—it will mean nothing, but to the owners of race horses the brand new running surface at Laurel race course is a godsend.

Brother Henry A. Parr 3d and company gave a face-lifting to the Laurel oval that puts the track out of this world—or at least out of the class of the usual Maryland race track.

It was necessary, at some points, to dig as far down as 14 feet but that was done. The result—a strip that already has the approval of the horsemen, although horses have been working over it less than three weeks.

With Resident Manager George H. Martin in charge, workmen went down to rock bottom to build up what probably will be referred to as "the best track in the East." Among other things, the low clubhouse turn was eliminated and the surface, termed "holy" by trainers and jockeys in other years, is now safe.

At $350,000 Cost

Moving of upward of 50,000 square yards of dirt and other manicuring efforts cost in the neighborhood of $350,000—and outlay that can't be apparent to the naked eye.

Of course, Laurel's official family hopes to get that cash back from the racing fans who are expected to flock to the course with the opening of the 25-day sport on Thursday.

Laurel has made many improvements, but perhaps the one that will strike the big note with the customers is the new policy on auto parking. Due to tipping in the past, it has been impossible to keep parking on a "first-come, first-served" basis. To eliminate this evil each autoist will be charged 25 cents for parking and tipping is out.

Patrons will be given a slip with the exact location of their cars. Those who want the service of a valet to park and deliver their cars will be charged an extra 50 cents The track has arranged to have a repair crew on the parking lot to make flat tires shipshape at no extra charge.

With no opposition from New Jersey, Laurel is looking forward to a record meeting. Pimlico and Bowie were off in wagering last spring while reportedly Havre de Grace operated at a loss.

Capital Is Feature

Laurel's opening day feature will be the $10,000 added Capital Handicap, a sprint of 6 furlongs and the first of 14 stakes to be offered during the month-long meeting. The big ones are the Selima and the Washington Handicap, each worth $25,000 and to be conducted as cofeatures on Saturday, October 23.

There's an excellent chance that Coaltown, the fleet sprinter of the Calumet Farm, will be seen in this three-quarters event. The speedy fellow hadn't been postward since winning the Jerome Handicap at Belmont on September 15. The distance suits him and his appearance would put a kick in the test.

Laurel never looked better than yesterday. The color scheme is green and white and the clubhouse is bordered by flower boxes containing pink geraniums, yellow chrysanthemums and purple petunias, growing out of a sea of hanging ivy.

Autumn has put in its first addition to the usual Laurel scene, changing a few trees on the backstretch to a vivid orange.

Yes, fall is here—and Laurel begins Thursday.

'Skins Release Macioszczyk, Who Cost Them a Touchdown

the Steelers to the Redskin 39, then faded to pass.

Placekicker Joe Glamp, who hadn't caught a touchdown pass in two years with the Steelers, took out in Macioszczyk's direction in the defensive left halfback position. He passed the former Western Michigan back like a streak and was all alone and lonely when he took Clement's long pass and jogged into the end zone.

Doug Turley's 33-yard run with a fumble, and Poillon's field goal from the 28—all in the last seven minutes of the game—finally won it, but fans were talking almost as much about the 'Skin drive that failed in the late third quarter.

In quick succession, Tommy Mont's interception of a pass and a Baugh-to-Crisler aerial on which there was interference gave the Redskins first down on the Pittsburgh 5. Three times in a row Washington was a hair's breadth from scoring, but didn't.

Jim Castiglia went over but was called back for being in motion. Paul McKee had a Baugh pass in his hands in the end zone and dropped it. Finally, Bob Nussbaumer was thoroughly blocked out by Tony Compagno and was a yard short of reaching Baugh's fourth-down toss on the goal line.

Washington's lofty position in N.F.L. standings, after one game, will get a thorough test come Sunday when the Tribe entertains the greatly improved New York Giants . . . Back of the Steve Owen crowd, which now includes Charley Conerly, is a 27-7 rout of the Boston Yankees . . . One of the Giants' two victories in 12 games last season was a 35-10 smashing of the Redskins.

NOTE TO DICK WEST—With the Redskins a man short of the limit, now's a good time to change your mind about playing this year. Your career in Princeton's backfield was closely watched by your D. C. friends, and they'd be tickled to see you neglect your dad's real estate business enough to perform at least one season.

Dan Sandifer, the L. S. U. rookie whose tackle and fumble recovery helped set up Washington's winning points Sunday, was still so woozey after the game he couldn't name his roommate . . . Watching his mates and dying to get back in Redskin harness was Eddie Saenz, the 165-point scooter who broke his leg on the West Coast . . . After an examination this week he'll know how long it will be before he can play again.

COLLEGE—From P. 16

Hoyas Open Against B. C.

Colonials came out of the Virginia Tech game with an injured end. He's Bill Szanyi, one of Rowland's best flankmen. He was kicked on the chest and may be unable to play Saturday.

Out at College Park, Split T-Tatum had his Terrapins sharpening up their offensive magic for the Delaware invasion. Several new pass plays were added and Quarterback Vic Turyn, who had trouble connecting Saturday in Richmond, had no trouble at all yesterday.

Physically, the Terrapins aren't in as good condition as Tatum would like to see them. Bernie Sniscak, right halfback, is out for three weeks with a bad knee. This leaves the Terps with only four right halfbacks.

Tackle Chester Gierula received a painful leg injury against Richmond and he, too, is sidelined for three weeks. That cuts the tackle department down to only seven.

Catholic Working For Opening Saturday

With Gene Aroni, 140-pound scatback, and Dick Orsini, 200-pound fullback, bidding for starting berths, Catholic University expects to show a high-powered attack when it launches its 1948 football campaign against Patuxent Naval Air Base at Brookland Saturday.

Bucky Ennis and Joe Dunn were the Cardinals' two best ball carriers until last week, when the newcomers sparkled in scrimmage.

Ennis and Dunn still will be the chief runners, but Aroni and Orsini will help Coach Tom Chisari vary his attack and give them a rest.

Three men have been lost for the season. Jim Dutton received a concussion in scrimmage, Bud Lilly broke his foot, and Bill Flynn tore a groin muscle.

Schweigert, Siskay On Wrestle Program

Dutch Schweigert a starlet from Kalamazoo, Mich., will cavort at the Turner's Arena for the first time tomorrow night in a half-hour performance opposite Jim Siskay, a Chicago wrestler.

The featured exhibit on the program will find Frank Sexton, one of the holders of the world heavyweight title, playing with Laverne Baxter, a reportedly villainous Texan.

Alexandria Starts Volleyball Season

Alexandria's Volleyball Lague, sponsored by the city's Recreation Department will start its season this evening at 7:45 in the Armory on S. Royal st.

The three components of the league, the Fraternal and Independent League, the Church League and the Civic League will play every Tuesday and Thursday. Winners will playoff at season's end to determine the city champion.

The Capital duo won the event at the Country Club of Maryland with a best ball of 64. One stroke behind and tied for second place were A. F. O'Linger and W. O. Pugh of Winchester, Va., and Harry Griesmer and W. L. Blatchford of Bethesda.

Eddie Johnston of the host club shot the best individual round among the 115 competitors. He turned in a 69, 1 under par, to win low gross honors in the amateur sweepstakes. Cliff Eley of Annapolis won low net with 75-7—68.

Three golfers tied for first in the pro sweepstakes. Severn White of Suburban, Al Houghton of Prince Georges, and Elbin all shot 72.

Brewer, Sooner Back Out With Broken Leg

Norman, Okla., Sept. 27 (AP).—The University of Oklahoma Sooners have lost the services of Halfback George Brewer, who broke his leg in the Santa Clara game, Coach Bud Wilkinson said today.

With Brewer lost to the team, Wilkinson said he plans to experiment with Jack Mitchell at Brewer's left halfback position, probably using him against Texas A. and M. Saturday.

Butter Price Cut 2c by Chain Here

A large Washington chain store yesterday announced it will cut butter prices 2 cents per pound effective this morning—for a total reduction of 7 cents in less than a week.

Ninety-three score butter, a spokesman said, will sell for 77 cents a pound. He described the figure as "the lowest price this year."

Other firms also announced plans for immediate reductions in price as wholesale butter prices dropped 2 and 3 cents a pound on the New York market—continuing a downward trend started last week. Top grade butter declined 2 cents a pound to 68 cents and grade C was off 3 cents, selling for 59 cents.

Philadelphia Orchestra Concerts Off

By Paul Hume

Harl McDonald, manager of the Philadelphia Orchestra, announced yesterday that there would be no 1948-49 season for that organization because of differences over wages.

Numbering 110 players, the Philadelphia Orchestra, which would celebrate its fiftieth anniversary next year, is the largest in the country.

McDonald said the decision to abandon the season was reached after board members decided unanimously that they could not meet demands for a higher minimum pay scale for members of the orchestra, demanded by Local 77 of the AFL Federation of Musicians.

The Philadelphia Orchestra has played concerts in Washington for more than 40 years.

Actress Ties Self to Mast In Shipwreck

Savannah, Ga., Sept. 27 (AP).—Actress Martha Sleeper and three other shipwrecked mariners were recovering today from the effects of a 10-hour battle against a sea that sank their yacht.

Martha

Miss Sleeper and three men aboard the Ella M. lashed themselves to the masts to keep from being swept overboard. The party was en route from New York to Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The men are Nicholas A. Schlangen, 50, a retired manufacturer of Springfield, Ill., who owned the yacht, and crewmen Gordon Ince and Charles Pender, both of Nassau.

The vessel was driven against a buoy and a stone jetty. The collision ripped out the bottom and the yacht went down, its deck only 2 feet under water. Soon the tide rose to 4 feet above the desk and the sea got rougher.

Several times, Miss Sleeper said, they fired flares but could not attract attention. Once a ship passed within 150 feet. Their cries for help were unheard.

Then they lashed themselves to the masts until the tide dropped Sunday morning, when they were able to reach a marshland in a dinghy. They waded for more than a mile to dry land.

Md. Extension Of Crime News Curbs Opposed

Opposition to proposed Statewide extension of the Baltimore court rule restricting publication of crime news has been voted by members of the Chesapeake Association of the Associated Press.

The group, composed of Associated Press member newspapers in Maryland, Delaware, the District of Columbia and southern Pennsylvania, held a weekend meeting aboard Gov. Lane's yacht, Potomac, in Chesapeake Bay. Gov. Lane did not participate in the conference.

In a resolution, association members said extension of the court rule, known as Rule 9 of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City, will "infringe on freedom of the press" and "deprive newspapers of news they ought to have," adding that the opposition expressed "is not a question of trying to influence policy—of which the AP wants no part."

Many other groups, including the Maryland Press Association, have previously opposed extension of the rule to the rest of the State. Four Baltimore radio stations and a radio news editor are now facing contempt of court charges under the court rule for broadcasts growing out of the knife slayings of Marsha Brill and Carol Bardwell.

Union Sends Jews Greetings

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

The Washington Ministerial Union yesterday sent greetings to members of Jewish congregations on the eve of the High Holy Days which begin Sunday at sundown.

At its first fall meeting at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., the group passed a resolution calling for recognition of the basic privileges which Protestants and Jews hold in common.

The privilege of religious freedom, the resolution said, "can only have meaning and validity when extended to all groups without bias or restriction. To deny this privilege to any is to jeopardize our own moral claim upon it."

Dr. Orris Gravenor Robinson, pastor of Calvary Methodist Church, and Dr. Fred Sherman Buschmeyer, minister of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, spoke on their impressions of the first assembly of the World Council of Churches in Amsterdam last month.

Both agreed that the fact that men and women of such divergent religious views could come together and could work together was one of the most significant achievements of the sessions.

Europeans, Dr. Buschmeyer said, do not believe the United States' moral resources are equal to the responsibilities which have been thrust upon it. They see the United States as a colossus dominating the world, he said.

They are grateful for our help, but they want to be free, he said, pointing out that they fear fascism as much as communism.

Later, the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, spoke on the Lambeth Conference of Anglican Bishops held in London in July and August. He told the ministers that it is a great mistake to look for "prophetic utterances" from committee reports, emphasizing that it is what is behind, and what flows from such meetings that is significant.

North Carolina Man Indicted by Grand Jury in Rape Case

A 26-year-old North Carolina farmer was indicted yesterday for the rape here of a park policeman's 31-year-old wife.

This was one of 31 indictments returned by the District grand jury. The cases were handled by Assistant United States Attorney Andrew J. Oehmann.

The rape defendant is Elvid H. Perrell of Bear Creek, N. C. According to the charge, he followed his victim as she rode a bus from downtown Washington to Anacostia and, as she approached her home, forced her into his car on the night of September 7.

The woman struggled with her assailant, but could not prevent him from driving her to a spot near Joliet st. and South Capitol st., where she was attacked.

In another sex case, Calvin J. Sneed, 21, of Oxon Hill, Md., was charged with housebreaking, assault with intent to commit rape on a 32-year-old housewife as she did her laundry in the basement of 216 O st. nw.

According to the indictment, Sneed hit her with a monkey wrench and while she was in a state of semiconsciousness, tried to ravish her.

Two New Yorkers were charged with trying to bribe a Commerce Department employe with $2000 in an attempt to get a license to export 200 tons of galvanized pipe to Venezuela. The defendants are Orlando Lokpez, 27, of Long Island City, and Louis Fledman, 41, of Flushing.

Mrs. Jean Lincoln, 26, widow of Edward A. Lincoln, a slain holdup man, was charged with three felonies in acting as the lookout and get-away agent for the husband. She is charged with a $303 robbery of Vaiden B. Hogwood, 2701 14th st. nw., a Bellevue Hotel clerk, and assault with intent to commit robbery and attempted robbery on Douglas L. Farr, manager of the Whitestone Hotel. Lincoln was fatally shot in the Whitestone Hotel job.

Edward F. Harrigan, 31, of 504 7th st. sw., was charged with possession of numbers slips and operating a lottery in the 600 block of 7th st. sw. A police undercover agent claims he placed several numbers bets with Harrigan in the 600 block of 7th st. sw., between Sepetember 3 and September 9.

Archibald I. Koester, 30, a Navy chief petty officer, of 605 Cedar Lane, Falls Church, Va., was charged with assaulting two policemen attempting to place him under arrest for drunk and disorderly conduct.

Two men were charged with second degree murder. They are Alex Ferguson, 31, of 1636 14th st. nw., and Marion "The Jungles" Brown, 31, no known address.

Among cases the grand jury ignored was one charging possession of numbers slips and lottery operating by Joseph Robinson, 40, of 1433 S st. nw.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Editor's note: This is the second of a series on the President's record dealing with the 2,200,000 Federal workers. A series on Thomas E. Dewey's civil service record as Governor of New York appeared here two weeks ago.

It's difficult to find a Federal agency—I know of none—that hasn't one or more civil servants or people with public service backgrounds in its top command. These are the types of people who dominate our Government's executive branch—not the political appointees.

This is all to the credit of the President, who has encouraged the career system and has added to its prestige by promoting people from the ranks to key policy-making posts.

It was brought out here yesterday that seven of the President's nine Cabinet members were either career people or else they had a record of public service. At least the same high percentage holds true for the other jobs filled by the President.

Ranking next to the Cabinet are the Secretaries of the Army, Navy, and Air Force, Kenneth Royall, John L. Sullivan, and Stuart Symington, respectively, each of whom was promoted to his present high post after serving Uncle Sam in several other jobs.

The bulk of the President's own White House assistants are men who have had years of prior Government experience. In this group is John R. Steelman who served many years as chief of the Conciliation Service; Matthew J. Connelly and David K. Niles, both of whom started their Government careers in WPA administrative jobs; Donald S. Dawson, Charles S. Murphy, and William D. Hassett, all of whom held a number of Federal jobs before they started to work for the President.

Agencies directly under the President, such as the Budget Bureau, Council of Economic Advisers, and the National Security Resources Board, are all manned at the top by career people or those with a record of public service as contrasted with a political background.

The Undersecretaries—the No. 2 jobs in the Cabinet departments are held in every case by people who were promoted to them from positions of lesser importance. And again, the political appointee hasn't been given a look-in on these important posts. For example, State Undersecretary Robert A. Lovett served during the war as the Army's Assistant Secretary for Air; Treasury Undersecretary Edward H. Foley, jr., began his Federal career as a lawyer for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Army Undersecretary William H. Draper was serving in the Army when he was promoted; Navy Undersecretary W. John Kenney is a former Navy general counsel; Air Force Undersecretary Arthur S. Barrows is a retired businessman who carried out overseas assignments for the Army prior to his present appointment.

Peyton Ford, the assistant to the Attorney General, an equivalent post, was promoted from the ranks; Vincent C. Burke, the First Assistant Postmaster General, also an equivalent post, started his Federal service as a low-paid clerk; Agriculture Undersecretary Albert J. Loveland was promoted from the ranks, and Interior Undersecretary Oscar Chapman was promoted from an Assistant Secretary. Neither Commerce nor Labor have Undersecretaries at this time.

The story behind the appointments of most of the Assistant Secretaries is much the same—very few of them were appointed because of their political influence. Among them are John E. Peurifoy of State, who was running an elevator at the Capitol not many years ago; Edward F. Bartelt of Treasury, who has been in Government his entire adult life; William E. Warne of Interior, a former public relations expert, and many more who have been promoted from the ranks.

The entire top staff of the Internal Revenue Bureau is manned by career people for the first time. Every key post in the housing field is held by men who worked their way up to them. Agency after agency and bureau after bureau is in control of the career people and those with public service records. The appointment of Oscar Ewing as Federal Security Administrator was one of the few strictly political appointments made by the President.

This series will continue tomorrow. The next column will deal with the President's civil service record.

LOYALTY: The anti-Communist Americans for Democratic Action have sent word to the President that the employe loyalty program is "rapidly deteriorating."

Leon Henderson, ADA president, urged the appointment of a commission of men composed of such people as Bernard Baruch, Owen J. Roberts, John Lord O'Brian, Dwight D. Eisenhower, Charles Evans Hughes, jr., James B. Conant, Karl Compton and others to investigate all phases of the loyalty issue.

Henderson said he had been told that the Government is cracking down on innocent people and the evidence, he said, "is too convincing to be dismissed."

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES: All nonstatus phone operators in and nearby this city must be fired before November 30 if their jobs pay from $2284 to $2498 to start. They will be replaced by those who passed the recent operator test . . . An exam for mathematician, with starting salaries from $3727 to $6235 a year, is now open . . . A test for inspector officer jobs in Public Health Service will be announced soon. The jobs pay $4479 to start. . . . James G. Yaden will retire this week from the commission staff to devote full time to the presidency of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes.

He Wanted To Purchase Brass Rail, Shapiro Says

Reputed Gambler Testifies That Is Why He Visited Cafe Frequently

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Isadore (Shep) Shapiro, reputed gambler, yesterday told District Court he frequented the Brass Rail restaurant because he was thinking of buying the business.

This assertion came in answer to questioning by Prosecutor Charles B. Murray who has been trying to substantiate the Government's claim that the celebrated "Brass Rail shooting" was an outgrowth of a numbers feud.

Charles H. Nelson, night manager, and Henry M. (Piggy) Leake are accused of shooting each other when Leake hammered on the door of the cafe last January 8, demanding to see Roger W. (Pop) Simkins, whom the Government says, he blamed for a decline in his numbers business.

Shapiro, who admitted visiting the cafe frequently and who said he knew Leake eight years and Simkins, whose wife owns the restaurant, seven years, asserted he heard about the shooting only "through the newspapers."

"What was your business that brought you there (Brass Rail) on many occasions?" Murray inquired.

"I was trying to buy the restaurant," Shapiro answered blandly.

In later testimony, Shapiro declared a 20-minute conversation with Leake in the office of the Brass Rail about three days before the gunplay consisted of the following:

Leake: "Hello: Pop (Simkins) around?"

Shapiro: "I believe he's gone to see the fight. I'm leaving."

Leake: "No. I'm leaving ahead of you."

"Was nothing else said—no back and forth talk in 20 minutes?" Murray asked.

"No, sir," said Shapiro.

Another witness was Mrs. Simkins, 2823 12th st. ne., owner of the Brass Rail, who said she was informed of the shooting by telephone while at home.

She said she then "called my uncle, Warren E. Scott, a member of the Metropolitan Police Department."

(Police records list a Det./Sergt. Warren E. Scott, attached to the general assignment squad.)

Murray questioned Mrs. Simkins with the jury temporarily dismissed. Later Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut decided what questions were permissible for the jury to hear.

"Did you not know that it is a fact your husband was engaged in the gambling business?" Murray demanded.

"No. I resent your saying that," the witness retorted.

"Do you know if your husband interfered with the gambling business of Henry Leake?" Murray pursued.

"I know nothing of anything like that," Mrs. Simkins asserted.

Simkins on the stand told the court his name was "Roger Williams Simkins . . . named after the first Baptist preacher of America."

"Are you a minister?" Murray asked innocently.

"No."

"What is your occupation?" Murray demanded.

Here James K. Hughes, attorney for Simkins, objected on the ground that the answer would tend to incriminate his client.

"I suppose the answer would," Schweinhaut agreed dryly.

"Has there been any change in your occupation in the last 20 years?" Murray pursued.

Hughes' objection was overruled and Simkins answered: "No."

Two Who Claim to Be Police 'Kidnap' Attorney and Wife

The Washington Post

MR. AND MRS. DON GRAY
Talking Over Their Experiences in "Kidnap" Episode

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

The bizarre story of how two men, posing as policemen, kidnaped an Arlington couple for 2½ hours, threatening to kill them if they resisted, was related yesterday by the victims.

The couple, Mr. and Mrs. Don Gray, of 1227 S. Taylor st., said the nightmarish experience began about 9:30 p. m. Sunday night in Alexandria.

So bizarre was the story that Arlington police admitted they had been "unable to make anything of it," although two uniformed policemen were dispatched to the Grays' home to see what could be done in the case.

Although the couple gave a full account of the kidnaping, police said the available facts were not definite enough to warrant any specific action.

Alexandria police also were brought into the case. Gray gave a description of the two men posing as Alexandria detectives. Alexandria police said there were no such men in their detective bureau.

Two Alexandria detectives were assigned to the case, however, and a lookout for the men was broadcast.

The Grays were on their way to visit friends in Alexandria's Cameron Valley section.

Driving in their car along Duke st., they noticed a black Buick sedan, "about a 1940 model," trailing their auto. Suddenly, the sedan swung in front of them, forcing them to stop.

Two men—one "tough, slim, and dark-complexioned, wearing an Army field jacket," the other shorter, round-faced, with light brown hair, got out of the Buick.

Both "had their hands in their pockets as though they had guns," the Grays related.

"Toughy," as the Grays called the first man, said he was going to take the couple in for "reckless driving." He added he thought Gray was "a likely suspect" in the recent slaying of Alexandria Policeman Robert Harris.

He told the couple he and his friend were "Alexandria policemen trying to clear this case up." When Gray asked for identification it was refused. The couple said both obviously had been drinking.

Then, according to the Grays' account, the men tried to get Mrs. Gray to come with them in their car.

The two men then ordered the Grays to follow them in the Gray auto, threatening "to shoot your tires out if you make a break."

The two-car procession turned off Duke st., up Quaker lane, then right into an unidentified dark little road. The two men stopped their Buick, turned out the lights, and came back to the Gray auto.

Again "Toughy" told Mrs. Gray, "Get in my car or I'll kill you both."

"You'll have to kill us both," Gray said he told him. "We're going together or not at all."

Said Mrs. Gray yesterday, "I just thought I was finished right then and there." She said "Toughy" told them he'd "just as soon kill you as look at you—I spent three years in the South Pacific and killed a lot of Japs."

Then, as one of them pulled a shotgun out of the Buick's trunk, both men changed their tactics, promised to take the Grays home. On the way, one of them unbuckled a shoulder holster with the pistol butt showing and tossed it into his Buick.

When they arrived at the Grays' Barcroft apartment, the attorney "invited both of them in for a cup of coffee—I still wanted to find out what their game was."

The men entered, bringing with them a half-consumed bottle of wine. They continued to identify themselves as "Alexandria plainclothesmen."

Gray told The Washington Post the Buick sedan carried Virginia license tags with six digits, the first three of which were "205."

35 Community Chest Fund Workers Tour Three Agencies

Thirty-five volunteer Community Chest Campaign workers took a special see-where-your-money-goes tour yesterday of three Chest-helped agencies.

The volunteers, all State Department workers, dropped in on Children's Hospital, the Family Service Association, and the Washington Boys Club. They were the first of five groups of campaign solicitors who will visit Chest agencies this week, before starting in to collect contributions for Greater Washington's $4,566,790 Chest goal.

At Children's Hospital, the campaigners made a tour of the surgical and convalescent wards, the blood bank, X-ray room, and the dispensary, where 70,000 out-patient visits were made last year.

Children's Hospital, 78 per cent of whose patients can't afford to pay for services, is one of 14 hospitals which benefit from the Chest-aided Hospitalization Fund. The 1949 Chest is scheduled to contribute $850,000 to the fund.

Next stop of the inquiring campaign workers was the Family Service Association, at 1022 11th st. nw., which lends a hand to family troubles ranging from illness and financial difficulties to "problem" children, marital disharmony, and work adjustment snags.

The association also operates two summer camps which were used by 721 boys and girls, 9 to 12 years old, last year, chosen on the basis of economic need.

The Family Service Association, 98 per cent Chest supported, served 2686 persons regardless of race or economic status last year.

The three-story modern brick home of the Boys' Club of Washington at 261 17th st. se., was the last stop on yesterday's tour.

Dues ranging from 75 cents to $1.75 a year allow the club's 28,063 members from all over the District to take their pick of the club's facilities.

The Boys' Club is 89 per cent Chest-financed and makes up the difference with dues and canteen fees.

Today's tour will cover the Salvation Army's emergency home, the play therapy room of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, and the Friendship House day home.

U. S. Ruled Bound by D.C. Rent Act

Authorities Study Effect on Those Living in Defense Housing Units

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The Federal Government, like any private landlord here, must obey the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act, the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

The decision is being studied by legal authorities to determine its effect on the occupants of some 8000 defense housing units here under control of the Government.

The specific case the appeals court decided was brought by Reginald P. Wittek, Navy Department machinist who resides at 5 Quadrant Green, sw. When the National Capital Housing Authority tried to raise his monthly rent from $38.20 to $43, Wittek went to court along with six other householders in the Bellevue development.

Claimed Exemption

The Government claimed that it was exempt from the rent-increase provisions of the rent-control act and that the Municipal Court, where the original suit was brought, didn't have jurisdiction to decide the case.

The appeals court said the Government was wrong on both charges, and reversed decisions of the lower courts which had sided with the Government.

The Government argued that the rent-control act applied only to "persons" and not to Federal agencies here.

Judge E. Barrett Prettyman, speaking for the appeals court, said:

"We cannot refrain from commenting upon the curious spectacle of one agency of the Government, the National Capital Housing Authority, asserting a right to violate a principle so insistently and emphatically proclaimed by the rest of the Government as essential to the public welfare."

Wittek was represented by Attorney Ward B. McCarthy.

Md. Man Gets 3-Year Term For Assault

A 23-year-old Chapel Oaks (Md.) man was sentenced to a maximum of three years in the Maryland House of Correction yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court on a charge of assaulting a Mount Rainier policeman.

The sentence was imposed on Owen Bodden by Judge Alan Bowie who also fined him $25 on a charge of disorderly conduct arising from a melee which sent Policeman John Chop to a hospital for head injuries.

According to testimony, Bodden struck Chop as the latter was attempting to place him in a police car. Chop fell, his head striking the bumper of the car.

The incident occurred September 18, in the 3400 block of Perry st., in Mount Rainier.

Silver Spring Improvement Plan Adopted

A ten-point working program for the years was accepted last night by the Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring.

The group, which comprises delegates of 20 civic associations in the Silver Spring area, will seek establishment of a central bus terminal in the Silver Spring business section and a comprehensive bus network that would extend to nearby communities.

Other goals okayed at the group's first meeting of the year include an increased roads budget, solution of storm and water drainage problems particularly at schools, and closer enforcement of business and bufilding permits.

On the program also, are promotion of greater interest in the Montgomery County budget, development of closer relations between the ACG and other civic groups, and "more appropriate" dedication of old streets.

President Victor Richter called upon the group's membership to offer constructive criticism throughout the year.

Barking Dogs Ruled Annoying Even if Masters Are Big Shots

Claude Williams, owner of Ashton Kennels at Ashton, Md., poses with one of his "boarders," an Afghan owned by Leo M. Murphy, 424 Crittenden st. nw.

As far as Judge Stedman Prescott of Montgomery County Circuit Court is concerned, a dog's bark can be annoying, even if his master is a big shot.

This was his ruling yesterday in upholding the plea of Sam Rice, one-time star outfielder for the Washington ball club, for an injunction ordering Claude P. Williams, operator of the Ashton Kennels, to do something about 40 to 70 howling dogs.

The dogs have been barking within 175 feet of Rice's home in Ashton, Md.

In giving the dogs their day, Judge Prescott said:

"One or more of the dogs belonged to Winston Churchill, Marlene Dietrich and Henry A. Wallace, and one witness testified the barking of a dog was 'music' to him.

"These are very prominent personages, but it is difficult to discern any difference in the annoyance caused by a large group of howling dogs whether owned by a Prime Minister, a movie star, a former Vice President, or just a commonplace person like oneself."

Then, finding a political implication in the problem, he continued:

"Indeed, if recent news items can be believed, the 'barking' of at least one of the well-known owners has been distinctly disagreeable to people in certain sections of this country."

Judge Prescott said he had been the owner and admirer of dogs since childhood. "But, he continued, "to attempt to house, feed, maintain and exercise 40 to 70 dogs in a village and within 175 feet of complainant's dwelling house without causing physical discomfort . . . would be quite difficult, if not impossible."

Rice's injunction suit, filed in August, 1947, charged the barking kept him from "sleeping, reading and conversing." In pretrial testimony last February he said he had been a dog lover "for 50 years, but I'm just about cured."

Williams said yesterday, "We're naturally going to do everything in our power to go along" with the judge's opinion. But to move the kennels, he said, was out of the question. "They're a $45,000 investment," he declared.

Follows Suicide

Court Names Collector of Porter Estate

Judge Edward A. Tamm yesterday appointed Attorney C. F. R. Ogilby collector of the estate of the late Charles B. Porter, former Times-Herald treasurer.

The District Court appointment was made on request of Mrs. Sibilla Campbell, housekeeper for the late publisher, Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, and executrix under a testamentary paper of Mr. Porter.

Mr. Porter committed suicide September 14 in a leap from his hotel in Clarksburg, W. Va. Subsequently, assertions were made in the Nation's press that the death was somehow connected with the will of Mrs. Patterson, who left the Times-Herald to seven key officials but excluded Mr. Porter.

Mrs. Patterson's daughter, Countess Felicia Gizycka, filed suit to set aside the mother's will, under which the countess receives $25,000 a year for life plus certain property from the $16,500,000 estate.

The countess also asked for the appointment of a neutral collector to preserve Mr. Porter's files and records until her contest is disposed of.

A "will" of Mr. Porter's was found among his effects, but was not properly executed. No other will has since been discovered, the court was told. There is but one heir-at-law, a half-brother, Alexander Porter, of Edinburgh, Scotland.

Guard Seeks Quintupled Appropriation

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The District National Guard wants to spend more than five times as much on its operations next year as it got from Congress last year.

This was learned yesterday when the District Commissioners released budget requests of $550,800 for fiscal year 1950, as compared with the $85,200 authorized for the current fiscal year.

Guard leaders were warned last spring that they would be prosecuted for future violations of the Federal anti-deficiency law after they requested additional funds to see them through June of this year.

Cite Loss of Receipts

The deficiency appropriation was requested when receipts from nonmilitary use of the armory were withdrawn from National Guard control. The funds later were put in a $50,000 revolving operational fund controlled by a three-man Armory Control Board, with receipts over that amount returnable to the general funds of the District government.

This year's request, which does not rely on receipts from public use of the Armory, is based on a change in emphasis from a "recruiting and development stage to a period of consolidation."

"It is expected," Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding general of the guard, states, "that the present ceiling limitations will soon be lifted and that the District of Columbia National Guard will be permitted to recruit up to its full authorized strength of 4031 members."

The increased fund requirements, General Cox continues, are based upon the "increased strength of the guard, on the added administrative work involved; on increased necessary maintenance and security required by the Department of the Army and Air Force.

New Bloodstains Also Studied by Authorities in Mahlan-Kline Case

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Sleuthing in the Mahlan-Kline murder case took on a new turn yesterday with reports of two significant developments.

Chief John H. Souers of the Anne Arundel County (Md.) police revealed that "about six" empty cartridges, ranging from .32 to .38 caliber, have been found in the vicinity of the spot where Mahlan's abandoned bullet-studded automobile was discovered.

Investigators also focused their attention on a new batch of blood stains, found on sod in a clump of pine trees near Ritchie hwy., about 2 miles from the car site.

Police took the newly found blood stains to be important since pine needles were noticed on Mahlan's car when it was inspected more than a week ago.

FBI Studying Cartridges

The cartridges were taken to the FBI here yesterday afternoon for study. Whether the stained sod, which Chief Souers ordered dug up for tests, was turned over also, could not be determined.

The FBI merely said an Anne Arundel County officer had "brought in some evidence."

Chief Souers said two of the bullet shells, definitely .38 caliber, were found "about two blocks" from the place where the 25-year-old postal clerk's car was discovered. He described the area as "on Mountain rd., about half a mile off Richie hwy."

These two clews consequently centered activity in the 11-day-old investigation around the spot where the 25-year-old postal clerk's car was found. His body and that of his 18-year-old companion, Mary C. Kline, were found days later some 12 miles to the southwest, each with a bullet in the head.

Fragments Found

Fragments of three slugs, believed to be .38 caliber, have been found during the probe by county and State police. Particles were taken from both the bodies, and a third was found in the young man's car.

Preliminary findings already have been sent to Anne Arundel headquarters, according to the FBI, and conclusive results are expected to be determined momentarily.

In pursuing the elusive killer—who police believe thoroughly "planned" the crime — Chief Souers said three more men were questioned during the day.

Two 26-year-old men and one 32 years old were interviewed, but were not held, Chief Souers said.

Investigation of the double murder was stepped up over the weekend after Gov. Preston Lane offered all resources of Maryland's two top law enforcement agencies to Anne Arundel authorities.

Governor Lane conferred Sunday night with Col. Beverly Ober, State police superintendent; Police Commissioner Hamilton R. Atkinson of Baltimore and Chief Souers and State's Attorney James C. Morton of Anne Arundel County.

He offered the county police services of both Baltimore City and Maryland State police officers.

Responding to Governor Lane's offer, Chief Souers asked the Baltimore Police Department to lend assistance. Lieut. Leo Kelley, of the Detective Bureau, was assigned to the case.

The chief, however, was not enthusiastic about new leads which developed over the weekend, and said, "I wish I could tell you we were going to solve the case today, but I can't."

17 Cabbies Cited for Soliciting Fares in Terminals

By John London
Post Reporter

Seventeen of Washington's Road Runners, a free-wheeling fraternity of hackers who specialize in hauling fares, mainly servicemen, to out-of-town points, yesterday got the red light from the law.

They were summoned before the Board of Revocation and Review of Hackers Identification Licenses. The complaint: Alleged violation of Public Utilities Regulations prohibiting soliciting of fares in public space—namely, bus and railroad terminals.

While driving fares to out of town points is not itself illegal, a Public Utilities Commission rule prohibits soliciting fares in public areas, Board Chairman Mrs. Mary Silver told reporters.

Complainants, she said, were Washington Terminal Police, Greyhound and Trailway Bus Terminals, as well as the Hack Inspector's office. Penalty for violations ranges from warnings to license cancellation.

The board, will meet again at 2 p. m. today to review yesterday's testimony, Mrs. Silver said, then make recomendations to the Commissioners.

Cabbies told reporters rates have become somewhat "standardized" over the years. Typical fare for a full load to Norfolk is $50; to Camp Lejeune, $60; Fort Bragg, $72 for example, they said. 'Several claimed rates were only about 15 per cent more than rail fare, 40 to 45 per cent more than bus rates.

"Of course, sometimes we'll take less, if the serviceman is low in funds," one hacker noted. Another pointed to a wrist watch he was wearing and said: "For a $10 fare to Newport News on Labor Day, I got this."

He said he would hold the watch 60 days to give the broke sailor a chance to redeem it for the fare. "Sometimes we ride them for free with only a promise to pay, if they're desperate," he added.

Others said they had a steady clientele of servicemen who contact them in advance and name a time to be met at a bus or railroad station. This is common, they said, where servicemen expect to light into town at a time when they would have to wait many hours for a bus or rail connection.

The cabbies contended that terminals are privately owned and so solicitation within terminals is not solicitation on public space. A cabbie caught stirring up business outside a terminal, however, might be more vulnerable, some conceded.

Alfred M. Schwartz, attorney for many of the drivers, told reporters it was an attempted frame-up by railroad and bus companies to "deprive these cabbies of their livelihood because they're cutting in on rail and bus business."

Celebrate New Zealand's Independnce Day

Berendsens Hosts at Reception

By Peggy Preston

NEW ZEALANDERS the world over celebrated their own "Fourth of July" yesterday. And here in Washington it proved the occasion for an especially festive party.

Hosts at the 6-to-8-p. m. reception were that genial couple who head New Zealand's diplomatic delegation in this country—Sir Carl and Lady Berendsen. The smaller of the "Down Under" countries was marking its Dominion Day, established in 1907, and by law always observed on the Monday following September 26.

The Berendsens entertained, as is their wont each year at this time, in the legation residence, with its wide terraces so ideally suited for a party such as this. For there was a huge crowd present, and it overflowed from the several spacious rooms on the first floor, to both terraces, the garden, and the paneled library upstairs.

It seemed that the entire New Zealand colony in the Capital was there. And the Minister thought so too, for he exclaimed in his typically jovial way; "Why Washington must be full of New Zealanders!"

The Diplomatic Corps was well represented and there was plenty of gold braid, emblematic of the dominions and this country as well. Scores of resident Washingtonians were on hand, as the Berendsens in their several years of station here have made hundreds of friends in every circle of society.

They received informally at the entrance to the drawing room. Lady Berendsen was wearing a black dinner dress, fashioned with wide taffeta skirt and bodice of black lace over pale pink chiffon. A cluster of tiny, pink-tinted orchids was pinned on one shoulder. On the opposite side of the room, over the fireplace, was an oil painting of the hostess, being exhibited for the first time. Done by the Austrian artist, Carnelli, it protrays Lady Berendsen in the same frock she wore for her party.

From Embassy Row

Among the first to arrive were the Ambassador of Honduras and Senora de Caceres, the former wearing the white lapel pin of a member of the board of governors of the International Bank and the International Monetary Fund. "I am due at a reception for the governors," explained the Ambassador. "But first I must pay my respects to my old friend, Sir Carl."

Mme. Koo came in, wearing one of those fascinating black satin sheath-like frocks, and tiny bolero of black fur. That handsome mother-daughter team, Mme. Thors and daughter, Margret, attended and others noted from diplomatic row were Mrs. Harry Andrews, wife of the South African Minister; the Irish Minister and Mrs. Nunan, Senora de Dillon, wife of the Ecuadorian Ambassador, and the Philippine Ambassador, Joaquin M. Elizalde.

The Indian Minister and Mme. Nehru were in the throng, as were the Syrian Minister and Mme. El-Khouri, and dozens more from the diplomatic ranks.

All Circles Represented

Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of the justice, was among those on the terrace, and also there we saw Senator J. William Fulbright and his chic wife, attired in a black satin cocktail suit, a small matching hat a-slant over one side of her head. Mrs. Robert Low Bacon was a guest, and among the Army and Navy crowd we noted Admiral Louis Denfeld, surrounded by a group of officers of other nations.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt were accompanied by their daughter, Laura Belle, and Mrs. Wyatt's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Graves of Madison, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim were there along with Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Burke, Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Air Commodore and Mrs. J. L. Findlay, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Hinton, Mrs. Barnet Nover, Miss Etta Mai Russell and Miss Marguerite Griffin.

Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Will Clayton, past president of the Woman's National Democratic Club; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, current club president, and Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint. The meeting was held at the Woman's National Democratic Club

Truman, Barkley Urge Democratic Vote For 'Peace, Prosperity' in Women's Broadcast

By Genevieve Reynolds

PRESIDENT TRUMAN and Senator Alben W. Barkley declared yesterday that world peace and prosperity depend upon victory for the Democratic Party in November. They made their assertion on a recorded radio program commemorating the anniversary of Democratic Women's Day, which was founded by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Listening in on the broadcast were some 100 "faithful" of the Woman's National Democratic Club here in Washington. Across the Nation similar groups gathered around radios in their respective clubhouses at special luncheons, bridge teas and receptions.

"You have learned through bitter experience that the Republican Party cannot be relied upon to bring your children a better tomorrow", declared the Chief Executive." For proof, you have only to look at the record of the 80th Republican Congress. He cited Congress' failure to control inflation, to pass an adequate housing bill, to provide Federal aid for education as evidences of GOP subservience to big lobbies.

The Chief Executive reminded the women of the Nation that the feminine right to vote was achieved under a Democratic President—Woodrow Wilson.

European Reaction

Senator Barkley, the Democratic candidate for Vice President, cited fear of war and inflation as the two overriding concerns in the minds of American women. The Democratic answer to those twin fears are that the Marshall Plan and the Truman Plan are working in Europe, he declared.

"I have just returned from a brief but highly informative visit to Europe", he said. "There I listened to the leaders of democratic Italy. I saw with my own eyes what those leaders, supported by the helping hand of the United States Government through the Marshall Plan, are accomplishing there.

"And as you so well remember, it was Italy, weak and prostrate from the shocks and horrors of war, numbed and stricken, where the forces of communism hoped most to succeed in their nefarious plan to make all Europe a Communist stronghold," he continued. "Yes, the Marshall Plan is working in Europe. The Truman Plan is working."

Barkley told his listeners that he could not report cheerfully on the fear of inflation, but there is hope if the women vote for "President Truman and myself" and elect a Democratic Congress. "Then we'll go down to Washington next January and bring prices back in line with ability to pay," he promised.

In the Listening Group

Among the Democratic women here who turned out to hear the two party standard bearers and to observe "Democratic Women's Day" were Mrs. John Steelman, wife of the President's adviser; Mrs. Julius Krug, wife of the Secretary of the Interior; Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, who accompanied the President and his family on the recent trip through Colorado on the presidential train.

Mrs. Clinton Anderson, wife of the former Secretary of Agriculture, was also there. Mrs. Anderson arrived in the Capital over the weekend with her daughter, Nancy, who is a student at George Washington University. She'll be around for a couple of weeks before heading back to New Mexico, where her husband is running for the Senate against GOP candidate Pat Hurley.

In an impromptu speech, Mrs. Brannan said that President Truman and his family received a rousing welcome in Colorado, reputedly a GOP stronghold. She predicted that President Truman and Senator Barkley would gain enough votes on the tour across the country to be reelected.

Still others present at the radio-tea were Mrs. Paul Porter, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint; Mrs. Will Clayton, former president of the Woman's National Democratic Club; Mrs. Walter H. Maloney, president of the Democratic Women's National Council; Mrs. Edward Meigs, Mrs. Julian Friant, Mrs. Hugh Butler, Mrs. Jackson Davis, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. Frederick Halstead, Miss Cynthia Hill, Mrs. Floyd Cook and Mrs. Helen Montfort Moodie.

Mrs. Maloney announced that the President and his family would arrive at the Union Station, Saturday, 10 a. m., and requested the club members to greet them there.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, club president, presided. She will leave in a few days to make campaign speeches for the Truman-Barkley ticket.

Food Editors Learn New Cooking Tricks

By Lucia Brown

New York, Sept. 27.—America's food editors learned the latest on cooking with gas, baking with mayonnaise, and feeding the baby at opening sessions of their fifth annual conference today at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

The baking-with-mayonnaise interlude came at a "soup to nuts" luncheon in the Sert Room, where we learned how to bake delicious canape pastry using mayonnaise. All you do is make a stiff dough of flour, water, mayonnaise, and a bit of salt and mustard-with-horseradish. Rolled thin and baked, this makes dainty and delectable wafers for spreading with canape mixtures. Mayonnaise lends itself to a lot of other unusual uses, too, food editors were told. Mixed with tomato juice, shredded vegetables, and seasonings, it makes wonderfully flavorful soup. We know, because we had bowlfuls for lunch. Nuts toasted in mayonnaise were another item on the menu.

As to cooking with gas, we got an editor's eyeview of the way home service departments of gas companies all over the country are helping women to use gas kitchen equipments more effectively. We also heard about the latest findings in kitchen planning by its homemakers' institute.

The range and refrigerator should stay close together if you want to save weary miles in the kitchen, we were told by economists, who have statistics to prove it. The refrigerator is the most used piece of equipment, they say, and the range rates second. The most steps in the kitchen are taken between these two.

Experts suggest a U-shaped kitchen, with the range at one end, the refrigerator at one side, and the sink on the other. Each of these, they say, should be flanked by its own cabinets, containing the things most used at that particular working place. The refrigerator should be closest to the dining room and the sink to the back door, the step-saving study shows.

A baby food firm brought the day to an entertaining close with a unique contest, in which six surprised food editors participated. Wearing natty white caps, they strained every effort and 6 pounds of green peas while their confreres, from all over the country cheered them on. Struggling with strainers, bowls and wooden spoons, they proved the point that the modern way with canned baby foods makes both mother and baby happier than oldtime methods.

Earlier in the day, M. Claudius Phillippe of the Waldorf took us on a tour of its huge kitchens, with their gleaming copper kettles, stacks of brown earthenware, and huge ovens.

Mrs. Marjorie Childs Husted was a speaker at the opening sessions of the conference. She emphasized the need of home economics training for the teen-agers of today who will be the homemakers of tomorrow.

"Lots of girls don't learn cookery at mother's elbow any more," she said. "Our schools are going to have to make up for that lack for the good of the American home."

Tonight, we're bound for a "Steamboat Supper," one that will be held on dry land in the "elegant Astor Gallery of the Waldorf." This promises several surprises in both the modern and mid-Victorian manner.

Serving Beans

A new way to serve snap beans is to team them with cream sauce and top them with grated cheddar cheese. If crisp strips of bacon and broiled herbed tomatoes are added you will have a delectable vegetable luncheon plate.

Apple Sauce Date Muffins

1½ cups sifted flour
3 tsp. Double Acting Rumford Baking Powder
3 tsp. sugar
½ tsp. salt
2 eggs, beaten
⅔ cup milk
½ cup apple sauce
3 tsps. melted butter
½ cup chopped dates

Sift flour, sugar, Rumford Baking Powder (no alum) and salt together. "Bake-Tested" Rumford has been trusted by three generations of good cooks. Combine eggs, milk, apple sauce and melted butter. Add to dry ingredients, stirring only until moistened. Fold in chopped dates. Fill well-greased muffin pans ⅔ full and bake in moderately hot oven (400°F.) 20 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

Man Who Greatly Loves His Wife Asks Help In Curbing His Morbid Jealousy of Her Premarital Affair With Famous Sportsman

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My wife Janice is a wonderful homemaker, has a marvelous personality and is so attractive that she evokes a second glance even from women. I have a very deep love for her and yet at times I harbor bitter resentment toward her. Can you help me stop torturing both of us mentally?

Before our marriage she told me of a previous marriage—the culmination of a high school romance—that lasted a day. This didn't bother me, but what I did resent was her friendship with a very prominent sportsman; and I resented it mainly because he was married and known for his promiscuous escapades.

Preceding our marriage there were many violent quarrels and more than once I was on the verge of leaving, but her pleadings, and at times her scenes of indignation that I could be so low as to suggest such a thing, caused me to feel, self-reproachfully, that I was wrong to think ill of her.

Wife Seems Not to Feel Contrite

ONLY during our honeymoon, in a very confidential mood, did she tell me of her affair with this "friend," which continued over a period of five years. Whenever he was away from home they had clandestine meetings, and I can easily see how expensive trips might turn a young woman's head, but five years seems a rather protracted post-adolescence. Why she told me, I can't say, unless her vain ego wanted me to know how famous she had been.

Since that day I've had periods of melancholic despair. My soul seems in constant torment, but I do love her, even though there seems to be no contrition on her part. She says the few people who know can forget, that they really don't matter, anyway; but can I forget? A glance at her expensive wardrobe, even being in our house where he visited so often, seems to stifle me.

She is young and beautiful and if I were to leave she would find someone sensible enough to see all the good in her, and make her happy. I realize my attitude is unhealthy and I try hard to fight against it, and we are very happy at times, but when I sink into these morbid moods, I destroy all the good things I've done. Will time and grim determination help? Please give me some hope, and answer soon. I do love her! E. D.

Man Is Afflicted by Self-Detestation

DEAR E. D.: It seems to me that basically your problem has to do with self-detestation, and in your case the two most conspicuous offshoots of this affliction are: 1. Inability to feel comfortable or secure or accepted in love relationship. 2. Actively hostile jealous envy (masked as righteous scorn) of manifestly magnetic sexually self-confident men and women.

Being that type of problem personality, your ailing ego asserts urgent need to be coupled socially, as sweetheart and husband, with a sensationally attractive female such as Janice, not with reference to her simple essence or natural lovability, but because she is young, beautiful, eye-catching, highly desirable from the male viewpoint, and the one-time favorite of a famous playboy.

The business of intimacy with so much fabulous femininity is to give the sick ego a build-up and bulwark, in terms that say to society and self, "See, I won and I hold the prize so generally admired." Love doesn't figure in the union, on your part at least, for as Dr. Edmund Bergler writes, "Neurotics can't love." (See his book, "Divorce Won't Help.")

Pernicious Anxiety Finally Finds Focus

YOUR SICK personality was the seeding ground of those violent quarrels with Janice preceding marriage. In agitating discord and threatening to leave, you were acting compulsively to "test" her devotion, bidding for vehement evidence that she didn't want you to go, couldn't bear to live without you, etc., and you valued her stormy pleading as salve to your constant tormented conviction of being detestable, or not love worthy.

Also your pernicious neurosis along this line accounts for your fierce resentment of the storied playboy's patronage of Janice, a destructive emotion that got up steam at the first hint he had figured in her life, long before she confessed their affair—a confession that you seized on instantly as excuse for bringing your free-floating jealous anxiety into vindictive focus.

You resent the fellow and all that he stands for, quite apart from his relations with Janice, which just happened to bring him into the spotlight of your conscious wrath, and you resent him mostly because you don't feel "equal" to him on the score of enjoying life, and this is somewhat the nub of your grudge against Janice also.

Thus you see how muddled your values and emotions are. You despise yourself, subjectively, for being a dud, as it were, in comparison to persons you profess to hate, for their follies and vices. And in my opinion, psychoanalytic therapy is the only help for so much confusion of mind and feeling. M. H.

Manhattan Season Still In Doldrums: Plays Fold; Only Television's Booming

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

New York, Sept. 27.—Though the weather's perfect New York is still in the midst of summer doldrums. Even the prospect of a juicy theatrical season, replete with gala openings and standing room only runs, is half fizzled before starting. Within the week three plays have folded, two of them much-touted presentations—"Story for Strangers," by Marc Connolly of "Green Pastures" fame, which have too much whimseyboo for Broadway audiences, and "Heaven on Earth," a musical featuring Brooks Brothers type Peter Lind Hayes. Mr. Connolly, who picks up pin money teaching dramatics at Yale, has presumably returned to New Haven fastnesses and young Master Hayes should be Hollywood bound.

Around "21," where glamorous visiting firemen usually drop in for a mess of frogs' legs or a special hamburger which nicks the bank roll for precisely $2.75, all was relatively quiet. Quiet, that is, until bobby socks hero movie actor Craig Stevens blew in. Mr. Stevens, fresh from West Coast triumph, was dressed in moccasins, check tweed sport coat, no hat and an unrestrained tie. Leaving the bistro he had to plow through the crowd of teen-age autograph addicts who, advised by studio publicity bureau, haunt the comings and goings of celluloid favorites. Television has appreciably enriched the lives of 21 patrons.

A machine is set up in the foyer and on Saturdays after luncheon, sofa's, comfortable chairs, are rolled up, and half the clients stay on to watch the baseball game. The television set has paid off handsomely in bar receipts—the average liquid consumption for a nine-inning game being 3 to 4 highballs or a greater number of fancier drinks such as stingers.

UPSTAIRS some of the ladies were shrugged into new outfits. From top table and occasional below table glimpses the new styles are not especially stimulating. The better heeled ladies were all clutching stoles made of brownish and doubtless terribly expensive beasts. None of those over the right ear type of hats were on view. There were lots of narrow brimmed squashed crowns with floating shoulder length scarf trimming. The skirts were narrow, shorter, and some of the dressier gals were shod in bronze kid and carried ditto leather bags.

A few blocks away Mr. Fred of John Frederics (Mr. John has pulled stakes and now has his own establishment on 57th st.) is going in for lots of fuzzy beaver type felt hats, trimmed with feather oddments, and lovely wide-brimmed affairs strewn with feathers, aigrettes or large velvet flowers. His dresses, when he makes them, are shirred to fare-thee-well and he's mad about muffs—mostly made from inexpensive pelts like squirrel or civet.

For the budget-minded, it is the year to wear Aunt Minnie's stole, deprive Washington's buffalo moths from finishing off little Susie's muff and tippet set.

Interesting for those who appreciate wonderfully made clothes is the fact Fira Benenson is no longer with Bonwit Teller and her whole collection is shown at Lord & Taylor's where it is duplicated in somewhat simplified form at much lower prices.

Sad sight for oldtimers is the disappearance of Cornelius Vanderbilt's house at 640 5th ave. Construction is already under way for a modern skyscraper future home of the Crowell Collier publication.

Miss Mary Catherine Fisher, whose engagement to John Stinson Lacey of Bethesda, Md., has been announced by her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Edward Fisher of Gaithersburg, Md. The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Fisher. The wedding will take place in November

Washington Hadassah Will Hold Institute

An innovation in the handling of administrative business will be inaugurated by the Washington Chapter of Hadassah with the adoption of a plan for an all-day administrative institute, Mrs. Joseph Freedman, president of the chapter, has announced.

The first session of the institute will be held today at the Jewish Community Center. The speaker will be Mrs. Julian Ansell, member of the National Board of Hadassah. Mrs. Ansell, who represented Hadassah as a delegate at the 22nd World Zionist Congress held at Basle, Switzerland, in 1946, is a former president of the New England Region of Hadassah and of the Boston chapter.

Mrs. Ansell will also be the guest of Ruth Crane on her radio broadcast over WMAL at 11:30 a. m. today.

The administrative institute, which takes the place of the former monthly meetings of the board of directors of Washington Hadassah, will function like a convention, in miniature. At the morning session, simultaneous meetings will be held by the major city-wide committees. Resolutions or recommendations adopted at these meetings will be presented to the full board for action at the afternoon session.

About Travel Services

Can you tell me where I can get information re: tourist accommodations for the country in general, other than through the A. A. A.?

M. K.

Duncan Hines, the man who has written a guide to good eating at restaurants all over the country, recently brought out a new book entitled "Lodging for the Night." This gives information about hotels and inns in many sections.

Many of the large oil companies give helpful road information, etc., but apparently this does not go into the field of tourist accommodations because of the difficulty of keeping such information up-to-date. A number of firms whose main offices are listed under "Oils" in the yellow section of the telephone book will give you aid in planning a trip. The person seeking information sends his itinerary to the company. As soon as the office has time to work it up, it will send him by mail the complete road plan for your trip, including maps, detour information, etc.

I am making drapes of solid blue, heavy, pebbly cotton and have not decided on the length. Window-sill length is too informal for this type of material, and I may not have enough for floor length. Is a length some 12 to 18 inches from the floor acceptable or would it look too skimpy?

There are three acceptable lengths for drapes: To the sill, to the bottom of the apron (the wooden trim below the window) or to the floor. Since you do not have enough material for floor-length drape, I would suggest you make them extend to the bottom of the apron.

What kind of coloring is used with acid fruits to give a bright clear hue? The ordinary vegetable coloring is not good when making mint jelly with an apple juice base. The red also fails to "take" in sour cherries.

C. S. S.

I know of no color other than vegetable coloring which would be safe to use in foods. However, I see no reason why you should not get good coloring in acid foods with these vegetable colors. Was your apple juice clear or almost colorless before adding the green? Perhaps you are not adding enough of the color to be effective. Also, are the colors which you have been using fresh?

Where can I get a copy of "Consumer's Guide"? I am particularly interested in one which discusses automatic washing machines and refrigerators?

A. P. G.

"Consumer's Guide" was once issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, but has now been discontinued. The January, 1946, issue contained a brief article entitled "For Happier Washdays." More recently, the Department has issued a leaflet called "How to Choose and Use Your Washing Machine" (No. AIS-73) and one called "How to Choose and Use Your Refrigerator (AIS-56.) These can be obtained by sending 5 cents (coin, not stamps) to United States Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C. They are publications of the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture.

Can you or your readers give me a recipe for a mocha cake that has a real, rich mocha flavor?

F. S. M.

Here is one that has both a mocha batter and mocha frosting.

MOCHA TIER CAKE

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup shortening
2 cups sugar
¼ teaspoon almond extract
½ teaspoon vanilla
4 eggs, separated
3½ squares chocolate, melted
1 cup strong coffee.

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cream shortening until soft and smooth. Gradually add sugar, creaming until very fluffy. Add flavoring and beat in egg yolks, then chocolate. Add flour alternately with coffee, beating until smooth after each addition. Fold in thoroughly the stiffly beaten egg whites.

Turn into five greased 8-inch layer pans and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) about 15 minutes. Put thin layers together with Mocha Frosting, made as follows:

½ cup butter
4 cups confectioners sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla
Dash salt
6 tablespoons strong coffee
3 tablespoons cocoa

Cream butter until soft and gradually work in sugar, salt cocoa, and vanilla. Add last of sugar alternately with coffee. Use enough coffee to make frosting proper consistency to spread. Put between layers and over top and sides of cake.

Follow Protective Diet

Reduce Without a Wrinkle To Look and Feel Younger

By Ida Jean Kain

BEFORE TAKING a fling at reducing, the modern woman wants reassurance that slimming will help her look years younger, and that she can reduce without a wrinkle. Fair enough.

What's back of wrinkles? Strain, usually. There need be no strain connected with reducing, if the protective nutrients are furnished. When reducing is done on a protective diet, science promises that you will not only feel younger, but look it—10 years younger!

Check to see if you are on a keeping-young diet. Do you have a pint of buttermilk, skim milk or whole milk daily? A dark green leafy vegetable, raw or cooked, every day? The green is so important as a source of vitamins and minerals. And do you eat two other vegetables every day? And two or three fresh fruits, one a citrus such as oranges, grapefruit or the juice? A whole orange is filling and adds bulk.

Provide for Proteins

To take care of daily wear and tear, do you include sufficient protein in the daily menu—a liberal serving of lean meat, fish or fowl, plus an egg and a serving of cheese or cottage cheese? And whole grain bread, three thin slices? The complete list affords perfect nutrition for about 1000 calories a day.

How many calories should your reducing diet contain? That depends on the number normally required. The 1000 calorie diet is the lowest that should be followed, unless advised by the doctor, like the 1100 or 1200 calorie diet—the extra hundred or two seem to add a bloom to the reducer. Perhaps because it allows for good eating and the dieter doesn't get grim.

The rate at which weight should be lost depends on the amount of excess fat. Two pounds a week is a good average. However, if you tend to lose in the face first, and reducing shows in your face, then reduce at the leisurely rate of 1 pound a week, or even three-quarters pound. And stretch, twist and bend gently to s-l-i-m down through the middle measurement.

Avoid Strains

Avoid strain in every way. It's when you're tired that folks ask if you've lost weight . . . even though you may have put on a few pounds! If you feel unduly tired, for no reason, then something is missing from the diet besides calories. Check the protective foods used daily and add a vitamin concentrate. Have a serving of liver once a week, and another of the meat organs at another time for more protein, vitamins and minerals. When elimination tends to be faulty, drink a big glass of hot water with the juice of half a lemon and a dessertspoon of molasses half and hour before breakfast. And before retiring, take some bulk-supplying substance—one that has a psyllium seed base.

What about beauty creams, lotions and tonics? They are so much "velvet" if used in connection with a good diet and toning gay attitude toward slimming exercises. And with it all take a down and you can look 10 years younger!

BEWARE OF PIN-WORMS

Medical reports reveal that an amazing number of children and adults are victims of Pin-Worms.

Watch for the warning signs, especially the embarrassing, nagging rectal itch. After centuries of Pin-Worms distress a really effective way to deal with them has been established through JAYNE'S P-W, the new Pin-Worm treatment developed in the laboratories of Dr. D. Jayne & Son. The small, easy-to-take P-W tablets give satisfaction or your money back. So why take chances on Pin-Worms! If you suspect this ugly infection, ask your druggist for P-W and follow the directions.
It's easy to remember: P-W for Pin-Worms!

"Thank you, Miss Smith . . . for locating the Lacerta Ovovipara lizard!"

Careless Trash

So often it is poorly packed trash that causes all the rubbish and papers to blow around the streets and over the lawns. Try pushing your discarded papers into discarded paper boxes or empty cartons as you empty your trash basket into the containers. These heavier pieces will not blow around so readily and you will find you will have much more room in your container as well.

Confectioner's Sugar

It saves so much extra beating and mixing to sift the sugar before blending it with the butter for an uncooked icing that it is a good habit to cultivate. The sugar may have been on the grocer's shelves for a length of time and it is almost bound to have tiny lumps in it.

Colorful Kitchen Curtains

One ingenious housewife ha brightened up her kitchen by making her curtains out of printed linen dish towels. She sewed rings at the top and hemmed the bottoms to make the curtains the proper length, using two towels to a window. They are readily pushed aside for more light and yet are very private and attractive closed.

Children's Toys

Be sure the children bring in their kiddie cars, velocipedes and wagons from outdoors after they are through playing for the day. Not only might they be stolen, but they might cause a passerby a serious fall.

No Forced Feeding

Mealtimes Should Be Pleasant

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

No matter how often mothers are urged to be more casual about their children's eating, in order not to promote problems, it seems to be human nature to insist that children eat what is put before them.

Mrs. J. C. describes how it works when parents are conscientious about not forcing food. "For a number of years I have read your column with interest," she writes, "and it has given me help, first as a social worker specializing in children's behavior problems and now as the mother of two children.

"The subject of food has always loomed important. In my work it seemed that children presented behavior problems when their families were rigid in their demands of what and when the children should eat. If the families would relax, the children would show fewer food dislikes.

"My husband (an ideal father who shares the work and companionship of the babies), and myself, believe that eating is a social pleasure as well as a nutritional necessity. We do not think food should be the subject for unpleasantness.

"Our oldest was nursed on a self-demand schedule as much as he wanted when he wanted it. We followed the same pattern when he was weaned. He has never been wakened to be fed. He began strained foods and egg at four months and chopped foods when he had some teeth. By the time he could sit up he was on four meals, three of which coincided with ours. He is now over two and eats everything we do except fried foods and highly seasoned ones.

"Once in awhile he just nibbles. At times he wants all fruit or all meat. We don't believe he needs any punishment for such behavior.

"Our pediatrician blessed our course of bringing him to the table. At one year he fed himself with a spoon. At 15 months he was very choosy about eating meat with a fork and soft food with a spoon. He can manage a cup if not overfilled.

"He sits at the table when we have company. We talk to him at meals. He doesn't demand extra attention and when he has had enough he is glad to play with his toys.

"We have found, with both children, that more is to be gained by respecting the baby's desires, as we would our own, than by some rigid adult plans of what is good for them to which they must conform."

You are right all the way, and your success is to be expected.

Advice to Parents

Let the child cut his own birthday cake even if the slices are a bit uneven and poorly served. There is a thrill in having one's own cake that is lost if someone else does the dispensing.

Do not insist upon kissing that 14-year-old boy in public unless you will be away for a long time. He hates it.

Don't worry so much when he shifts from a long overcoat one day to a lumber jacket the next. He will put on more clothes if he is cold and at 16 covering up the kidneys is not so important as in the roaring 40's.

Don't ask the 18-year-old where he is going each time he steps out of the house. You have trained him properly; now let him develop a bit on his own.

"TALES OF THE SOUTH PACIFIC"

by JAMES A. MICHENER

THE AUTHOR: James A. Michener was born in New York with a lively imagination and a deep desire to see the world. He visited 45 states before he was 20, lived in eight European countries after college, and sailed the Mediterranean on a British merchant ship. During the war he served in the Pacific as a trouble shooter in naval aviation maintenance, and later covered fighting areas from New Guinea to Tahiti as a Senior Historian. "Tales of the South Pacific" is his first novel.

1948 PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL
BEGINNING SUNDAY, OCTOBER 3, IN THE WASHINGTON POST

Here, in serial form, is the book that thousands have called the best piece of fiction to come out of World War II.

"Tales of the South Pacific" is a dramatic story of passion, hatred and sudden death among American fighting men on faraway tropic isles.

It's the story of Bill Harbison, a naval officer who lived like a hero but turned out to be a heel when a pretty nurse succumbed to his charms.

It's the story of Tony Fry, who fought a very personal war in his own very effective way.

It's the story of Bloody Mary, the colorful Tonkinese woman who introduced her daughter to a young Marine lieutenant—and started a conflagration.

It's the story of real people in realistic situations, drawn from his own observations by a master narrator. Because he was there, Michener has been able to reproduce the mood and atmosphere of those critical and exciting days.

If you like fast-moving action, heart-pounding romance and gripping adventure, don't miss this outstanding feature.

"Tales of the South Pacific" will appear in consecutive Sunday tabloid installments, beginning October 3, in

Movie Included Extra Added 'Distraction'

Capt. and Mrs. William T. Fisher of 700 S. Arlington Mill dr., Arlington, Va., went to the movies the other night with Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Clinkscales of the same address.

The picture they saw wasn't nearly as exciting as what happened after it was over.

As the two couples reached the movie parking lot after the show, they were startled to see a nice shiny Hudson—driverless—rolling down a grade straight at another parked car.

All four Fishers and Clinkscales leaped into action with a whoop and a holler, and fought a stubborn delaying action with the runaway Hudson until the boys managed to kick the front wheels into enough of a turn to avert repair bills for both owners.

The moral of the story: Always be sure your hand brake is properly set when you park. And if you're on a grade, it doesn't hurt to leave the car in gear, too.

SHAGGY DOG DEPT.

Edna K. Stanley of 2319 20th st. nw. is back from a trip through Massachusetts with a new switch on an old gag.

Driving through New Bedford, she saw a truck whose back end bore the warning:

"Please be careful. Blind man driving."

Cautiously pulling up alongside the truck, Edna was relieved to find that it belonged to a company which sells Venetian blinds.

Jokes run in families, and basically they're pretty much the same. That one is a descendant of the gag that begins: "Do you know how to make a Venetian blind?" When you say "no," the comedian tells you to poke his eyes out.

Similarly, "Is it possibe to get down off an elephant's back?" The answer is: "Of course not, silly; we get down from birds."

Sometimes stories of this type are built up into big production numbers. Like the one about the man who is walking by a pasture when a horse calls out to him.

Startled, the passer-by goes over, and listens with mounting interest as the horse tells him the story of his life. It is climaxed by an account of the memorable day he won the Kentucky Derby.

Impressed and excited, the man seeks out the farmer who owns the horse, and begins offering fabulous sums for him. But the farmer won't sell.

"He's an old, broken-down nag," he says, "and I don't want to cheat you."

"I don't care what you say," replies the stranger heatedly. "I think he's a wonderful horse, and I've got to have him."

"Oh ho," laughs the farmer, "now I get it. He's been telling you he won the Kentucky Derby, hasn't he? Well, don't you believe a word of it, mister—that there horse is the biggest liar in the county."

OVERHEARD IN A SUPERMARKET LINE

He: I've only got a dollar myself. Tomorrow is payday.

She: I'll swear I don't know what you do with your money. It's the same story every week.

He: If you're such a good manager, how come you always have to ask for an advance the day before I get paid.

She: Oh, shut up and give me the dollar.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I wonder how many other homeowners have this same problem:

We can seldom find parking space any place near our house. Regardless of which shift my husband works, there's no place to park when he comes home.

Mrs. Frank Cooper
201 Anacostia rd. se.

Dear Mrs. Cooper:

Many Washingtonians have the same problem. It's aggravated by the presence of so many apartment houses which make no provision for tenant parking.

But a similar situation also exists in many cities where private homes (with garages) predominate.

For example, back in Cincinnati, we lived next door to the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity house. Every time the Cincinnati Bearcats played a football game we were stymied.

People would park in our favorite spot, in the adjoining bus stop, in our driveway—and on several occasions in our garage.

One day I came home and found a strange car in our driveway. I had to park a mile away and take a streetcar home.

When I got back I stormed into the SAE house and found Judge Dudley Miller Outcalt there. "What are you sizzling about?" the Judge asked.

"Some knucklehead parked in my driveway," I growled. "I had to go half-way downtown to park."

"Gee, I'm sorry," replied the Judge. "I guess I'm the knucklehead. I thought you'd recognize my car and move it. I left the keys in it."

That, incidentally, was the last time I saw the Judge alive. I was in the city room of The Washington Post several years later when an Army plane crashed near White Oak, Md., and the first report from the scene was:

"There's some gear scattered around the wreckage. It's marked 'Col. D. M. Outcalt'."

The Judge had been an ace in the first war, and had resigned from the bench to serve his country again in the second.

It was a rough way to get the bad news, and as I culled my memory for the biographical material the city desk was asking for, I couldn't help but recall those last words:

"Gee, I'm sorry, I guess I'm the knucklehead."

I've been a bit more philosophical about my parking problems since then.

Bill.

NEWSCASTER'S DELIGHT

I'b glab I'b not one ob those sissies who cobes down with a code this time ob year.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK—With the exception of Georges Carpentier, few outsiders were permitted in Marcel Cerdan's dressing room to wish him well before the Tony Zale fight. Jack Kearns, who was Jack Dempsey's manager, insists that Carpentier was the victim of well-wishers as well as of Dempsey . . . Kearns says that he asked a stream of his friends to go to Carpentier's dressing room before the fight, shake his hand and wish him luck. Each of these visitors gripped the fighter's hand firmly, to express sincerity and also to immobilize the Frenchman's fingers, which hadn't been bandaged as yet.

Because too many British subjects paid the bills of American visitors in British pounds—and then accepted dollars from them, at half-rate—Nassau's new regulations this season will provide that Americans will have to pay all bills in dollars.

Cerdan's contract with the Tournament of Champions gives him a flat percentage for his next fight, without any guarantees. The promoters will try to eliminate guaranty clauses from all their contracts . . . At last week's meeting of the Hoyle Club, playing against Howard Lindsay, Russel Crouse and George S. Kaufman, Meyer Davis drew five cards on a busted poker hand and came up with a royal flush.

George Jessel tells the story of a Pacific veteran about to be sent home from Tokyo. The veteran said: "I've been a soldier all these years and never killed a Jap. I just can't go home to Brooklyn without killing a Jap." He polished his gun, left his barracks and was missing the next day. His friends found him bloody and unconscious, in the middle of a Tokyo alley. Nearby was a Jap soldier, also bloody and unconscious . . . "What happened?" the Brooklyn GI was asked, after he was revived . . . "Well, I went out to kill a Jap and I found this Jap soldier. I said 'T'heck with Hirohito' and he said 'T'heck with Leo Durocher.' So we shook hands," said the GI, "and then a jeep must've come along and hit us both."

Contrary to all rumors, Judge Sam Rosenman has NOT written any of the President's campaign speeches . . . Evelyn Waugh no longer is the darling of the British literary teas. At a recent tea, when introduced to a man who said "Pleased to meet you," Waugh replied: "I wish I could say the same" . . . Mrs. Betty Henderson, who monopolized the publicity at the Met. Opera opening last season by placing her legs on a table, has completed her plans for the new opening. She's commissioned her hair stylist, Mark, to create a futuristic coiffure which requires three fittings . . . Norman Thomas, the tallest of the Presidential candidates, will make a campaign tour by Austin car.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Thomas Strikes Back at Ferguson

By Drew Pearson

Yesterday this column published an extraordinary letter written by Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma, Democrat, to Senator Homer Ferguson of Michigan, Republican, threatening to expose Ferguson if he did not call off his investigation of Thomas' commodity market speculation.

FERGUSON

Before he wrote that letter last February 13, Thomas sent his campaign manager, Marty Heflin, brother of Movie Actor Van Heflin, to Detroit to investigate Ferguson; Thomas himself went to Chicago. Together they collected the "pertinent facts, the memo of the stockholders, the number of shares and the official positions held by each such stockholder" which Thomas threatened to make public.

This reference pertained to the "Chrysler Airtemp Sales Corp." at Grosse Point Farms, Mich., a lucrative sales agency which the Chrysler Motor Co. tossed into the lap of Ferguson's young son-in-law, Charles R. Beltz. With the public clamoring to buy air-conditioning units, this kind of agency could be nothing short of a gold mine.

Senator Thomas' "pertinent" facts, though unpublished, also showed that son-in-law Beltz, though president of the company, owned only 120 shares of stock, while his wife, Amy Beltz, owned five shares and Senator Ferguson's wife, Myrtle, owned 125 shares. According to Senator Thomas' information, they were the sole stockholders. Thus it was possible for Senator Ferguson's wife and daughter to outvote the president of the firm.

Thus, also, Mrs. Ferguson appeared to be the largest beneficiary.

Thomas also collected information purporting to show that Myrtle Ferguson, the Senator's wife, had been designated as the resident-agent for Airtemp in Washington, which indicated that the company either did business or tried to do business with the Government. (A Senator is not supposed to profit from any fee or business transaction with the Government.) Senator Thomas also said in his letter to the Michigan Senator that he had reports as to "where you have spent your summer vacations, whom with, who paid the bills, or when and how you have entertained here in Washington . . . Swanky parties with all that goes along—including the best of drinks, including good champagne—all paid for by another—is not good publicity."

Thomas referred in this case to information he had received that Ferguson was royally entertained by B. E. Hutchinson, general manager of Chrysler, and spent summer vacations with him.

Thomas also told Ferguson he had reports that "dresses," which Thomas said he had heard were given to members of the Ferguson family, also referred to gifts from the Chrysler people.

Before receiving this letter Ferguson had a staff of investigators at work on Thomas and had fought several Democratic members of his committee who wanted to drop the Thomas probe. But following receipt of Thomas' letter, Ferguson never let out a single, solitary peep. The investigation of his Democratic colleague from Oklahoma was dropped like a red-hot ingot.

Veteran newsman Bascom Timmons was guest of honor at a luncheon last week to announce publication of his new book, "Garner of Texas."

For the luncheon, Cliff Berryman, famed cartoonist of the Washington Star, drew a cartoon of Timmons and his old friend, the former Vice President. Toward the end of the luncheon, the cartoon disappeared. George Stimpson, one of the luncheon guests, searched for it. So did Ed Jamieson, a member of Timmons' staff. But no cartoon.

Finally, Stimpson made a brief speech, appealing to the 50 newsmen present to search for the lost cartoon, following which Willard Kiplinger, publisher of "Kiplinger's Letter," pulled it out of his breast pocket and handed it back. The boys weren't quite sure whether Kip had a bad memory or meant it as a joke.

Note—Timmons, who knew Cactus Jack Garner better than anyone in Washington, has written an amusing account of the old man's life, including his feuds with FDR.

Dyke Cullum, who was caught tampering with the dried-pea market, is now speculating in grain. He was one of Oklahoma Senator Elmer Thomas's curious "business associates" back in the heyday of the Senator's commodity speculations.

Four other members of the ring—Ralph Moore, Robert Harriss, Tom Linder, Agricultural Commissioner of Georgia, and J. E. McDonald, Agricultural Commissioner of Texas—have been indicted by the Justice Department. Cullum is still under investigation.

An offshoot of a polygamist cult has settled near remote Widtsoe, Utah, and has the ranchers up in arms. The ranchers don't object so much to the multiple wives, but to alleged theft of irrigation water by the polygamists, fencing of country roads and growing wheat on Government grazing land.

Polygamist headquarters are across the border in Short Creek, Ariz., but some of them have strayed to Utah.

Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, hero of Corregidor, will start selling life insurance to servicemen—just as soon as he can get some more big-name generals and admirals to go into business with him. He has already invited retired Air Chief of Staff Carl Spaatz to join him.

Financial backing for Wainwright's new firm has already been put up by Lincoln National and Mutual Life Insurance companies, but the general says his firm will be nonprofit. He will call it the Armed Forces Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Note—Wainwright has already loaned his famous name to three companies. He is board chairman of Hom-Ond Food Stores, vice president of Acme Sash Window Balance Co., and manager of the Alama Stock Farm.

Whatever weather

I wish that I could always smile . . . When there are clouds of gray . . . And when the gushing rain appears . . . To wash the world away . . . And sometimes when the sun comes out . . . I am inclined to sigh . . . Because I cannot shed a tear . . . No matter how I try . . . The weather seems to rule my life . . . From morning until night . . . And there must be a perfect sky . . . To keep my spirits bright . . . I am a prisoner of rain . . . A servant to the snow . . . And I am buffeted about . . . By all the winds that blow . . . I live in fear when thunder roars . . . And lightning stabs the ground . . . And I am lost in dreams of love . . . When stars are all around.
